Inquiry into water policy in Wales – Evidence from the Minister for Natural Resources and Food

Introduction

1. The Welsh Government provides the strategic direction for water policy in Wales, framed within a complex set of regulatory and operational responsibilities. Our core principles are ensuring access to safe drinking water, maintaining water and sewerage services at an affordable price and compliance with statutory obligations that drive all round water quality.
2. The Programme for Government, published in September 2011, set out the key actions that we will be taking in relation to water and the measures we will use to track progress. This builds on the wider commitments in relation to water set out in the Environment Strategy for Wales 2006, the Sustainable Development Scheme – One Wales: One Planet 2009, the Climate Change Strategy for Wales October 2010, the Strategic Policy Position Statement on Water 2009 / 2011 and the previous Ministers Written Statement on Water – December 2011.
3. The Tackling Poverty Action Plan sets out a range of commitments to ensure water bills are kept at an affordable level and for customers to have a choice of charging options that will reduce debt and protect vulnerable groups.

Water Affordability

4. In December 2009, Defra and the Welsh Government jointly commissioned a Review of Household Charging and Metering for Water and Sewerage Services, which was led by Anna Walker, the then Chief Executive of the Healthcare Commission.
5. The Walker Review examined the current system of charging households for water and sewerage services and covered water affordability, along with proposals for encouraging greater water efficiency and possible future options for water metering.
6. One of our top priorities is to reduce poverty in Wales and one of our particular areas of concern is about the impact of water charges and the impact of rises in water bills on those customers who are least able to pay.
7. Water affordability is part of a broader issue of general poverty, where households struggle to afford the necessities of life. This is especially important when considered alongside other utility and household bill increases.

8. Our current and emerging policy proposals build on the Written Statement on Water Policy in Wales that the previous Minister for Environment and Sustainable Development published on 12 December 2011. This highlighted affordability as a key priority for the Welsh Government and stated the intention to further develop aspects of the Walker Review for proposals within the draft Water Strategy for Wales which we intend to publish for consultation later this year.
9. Over the last six months we have been analysing research and holding discussions with stakeholders across the water sector in Wales to develop our affordability policy. We have identified the following outcomes for the strategy:
 - Water bills are kept at an affordable level.
 - Customers have a choice of charging options that will reduce debt, drive up efficiencies and deliver benefits for all while protecting vulnerable groups.
 - Water and sewerage charges are fair and equitable for all customers.
 - Customers are protected from any unnecessarily large increases in bills.
10. A household is deemed to be in water poverty if they pay more than 3% of their income on their water bill and if a household pays more than 5% then they are deemed to be in severe water poverty. According to the most recent information from Ofwat 30% of households in Wales spend more than 3% of their disposable income on their water and sewerage bills, with 14% of households spending more than 5%.
11. To keep water bills at an affordable level and reduce water poverty we have been developing a number of specific proposals, based upon the recommendations of the Walker Review, that will ensure we have a sustainable and fair system of charging in place. Taken together, these measures will help improve water affordability in Wales over the course of this administration.

Social Tariff Guidance

12. Our Social Tariff Guidance was published on 1 March 2013. This Guidance aims to reduce charges for water consumers in Wales who have difficulties paying their bills. As part of the Programme for Government, Welsh Government officials are required to regularly report on the:
 - number of water undertaker social tariffs developed in accordance with the guidance
 - number of social tariffs approved by Ofwat
 - number of households benefiting from social tariffs
 - level of water company debt reduced.
 - customer acceptance of proposed social tariffs

- and decreases in the levels of people experiencing water affordability in Wales

13. Officials will review the Guidance as and when necessary to ensure it is fit for purpose, undertaking a formal review of social tariffs in Wales after the water and sewerage undertakers Asset Management Plan 6 (AMP6) period ends in 2020. This will allow appropriate time for the water and sewerage undertakers to measure the success of their tariffs.

Bad Debt Regulations

14. 'Bad debt' results from unpaid bills that end up written off by a water company as a loss either because the debt cannot be collected, all reasonable efforts to collect it having been exhausted, or where the cost of pursuing further action in an attempt to collect the debt exceeds the cost of the debt itself.

15. Bad debt currently adds an average £20 to every water customer's bill. In Wales we are committed to tackling this bad debt in order to help lower bills. At present, the occupier of a property is liable for payment of water bills, but some people do not pay their bills and many water debtors are tenants.

16. In an attempt to tackle this issue, Section 45 of the Flood and Water Management Act 2010 provides that landlords are liable for water charges if they do not pass the details of their tenants to water companies. This part of the Act is not yet in force and in order for it to come into force the Welsh Ministers must issue Regulations.

17. We are currently developing a consultation on 'Bad Debt' Regulations which we intend to publish for consultation later this year. The Regulations will place a duty on landlords to provide details of their tenants to their water company or face being held liable for any unpaid water bills at properties they own.

18. This is an important consultation which will ensure that we tackle bad debt in the water industry in the most appropriate way for Wales.

Metering

19. Between March 2011 and July 2011 we consulted on the recommendations from the Walker Review of Charging for Household Water and Sewerage Services, which also included the potential role of water metering in future charging structures.

20. The consultation explored the implications of a metering programme for Wales. The consultation also looked at a number of approaches to metering and a range of scenarios about levels of metering uptake and the overall impacts on customers and their bills.

21. The majority of respondents to the consultation agreed with our guiding principles to help inform decisions on the future policy and a legal framework for metering. These were putting in place sustainable long-term solutions, promoting behavioural change and protecting vulnerable and low income households.
22. Overall, responses to the consultation indicated that people were generally supportive of metering as it promotes fairness and can encourage efficient water usage.
23. We are currently in the process of developing an impact assessment which will look at potential options to deliver a phased and proportionate metering programme for Wales. This will inform proposals which will be presented in our draft Strategy.

The UK Water Bill

24. The draft Water Bill includes the commitments to legislation set out in the UK Government's Water White Paper Water for Life and meets many of the recommendations of Martin Cave's independent Review of Competition and Innovation in Water Markets.
25. The majority of the draft Water Bill focuses on the UK Government's market reform proposals to unbundle water supply and sewerage licensing to facilitate and enhance a competitive market in England. This will allow all businesses and public sector bodies in England to be able have a choice of retail service provider.

Market reform

26. The Welsh Government is committed to ensuring customers are at the heart of the delivery of water and sewage services in Wales and this reflects the Welsh Government's approach to citizen centred delivery. Our aim is to see high quality, affordable, resilient and responsive services for both domestic and business customers in Wales.
27. In September 2009, the UK Government and Welsh Government issued a consultation on the Cave Review. The UK Government consulted on proposals for taking forward the recommendations from the review in England. The Welsh Government did not seek views on similar proposals for Wales, but used the consultation document to provide an opportunity to receive comment on the appropriateness of the recommendations in relation to the water industry in Wales.
28. Officials have reviewed a number of reports and have met with Ofwat and Defra on various occasions to discuss how retail and upstream competition in the water industry could benefit Wales. However, to date, we have not received any clear modelling or evidence to demonstrate the benefits of taking these policies forward in Wales at this time.

29. Officials are currently in the process of commissioning a study which will look at the current water industry regulatory and legislative framework in Wales (baseline). This will enable the Welsh Government to understand whether the current regulatory regime in Wales is fit for purpose. We will also be exploring options to test against the baseline that will ensure customers in Wales receive the best service and we continue to encourage our water companies to embrace the demands from efficiency. These options would include as a minimum enhanced regulation and incentivisation and market solutions.
30. We will also be taking an opportunity to assess what service requirements and expectations business customers have in relation to the water industry in Wales.
31. Our Water Strategy consultation will be used to explore a range of options which will focus on the requirements of business customers within the water and sewerage supply areas of Wales and efficient regulatory mechanisms to enhance improvement and innovation in the industry. This consultation will help to inform the Welsh Government's approach to providing both domestic and business customers with affordable, resilient and responsive water services.

Water Strategy for Wales

32. The Programme for Government set out the development of a Water Strategy as a key action for the current administration.
33. The Strategy will set out the Welsh Government's strategic direction for future water policy in Wales and it will consider how, as a Government, we can support the economic, environmental and social needs of Wales. In particular, the Strategy will aim to look at water in the widest sense – what is our relationship with water and what do we need to do to derive the greatest economic, environmental and social benefit from this resource.
34. The Strategy will be set in the context of wider Welsh Government policy including the Living Wales Programme, the Tackling Poverty Agenda, and the Climate Change Strategy for Wales. It provides an opportunity for us to exemplify our approach to natural resource management.
35. In particular, the Strategy will seek to respond to relevant recommendations which the Welsh Government intends to take forward in relation to a number of reviews:
 - Martin Cave's 'Independent Review of Competition and Innovation in Water Markets (April 2009)'
 - Anna Walker's 'Independent Review of Charging for Household Water and Sewerage Services (December 2009)'
 - David Gray's 'Review of Ofwat and Consumer Representation in the Water Sector (August 2011)'

36. Over the past 6 months, we have undertaken a significant amount of Stakeholder engagement activity to test and inform our thinking. This has been conducted through individual meetings with water companies, regulators and other key stakeholders to discuss their priorities and aspirations for inclusion in the strategy. On 7 November 2012, we held a specific workshop with members of the Water Industry Forum for Wales to understand strategic objectives for the water strategy.
37. A series of policy workshops were held through February 2013 with two more scheduled for May 2013. The purpose of these workshops is to seek views and information from key stakeholders to inform development of the consultation on the Water Strategy. Each workshop covered a key topic that the consultation will address. The topics were:
- Delivering high quality drinking water in Wales;
 - The future management of sewerage and drainage services in Wales;
 - Water resources in Wales
 - Delivering results for customers - the future of the water industry;
 - Delivering results for household customers - tackling water poverty and affordability issues;
 - The value of water;
 - Water resources management in Wales - an ecosystem approach.
38. We are in the process of analysing responses to the workshops held so far.

44 April 2013

Amry Dafydd,

SCRUTINY SESSION ON 21 FEBRUARY 2013

Thank you for your letter of 4 March following my appearance before your Committee session on 21 February.

I was disappointed to read your and the Committee's concerns about the information provided before and during the scrutiny session. My aim is always to disclose all the necessary facts openly and with the utmost transparency. I will set out below the information you have asked for, along with my assurance of my support for the work of the Committee in the future. I will address your concerns in turn.

Financial information provided to the Committee

I share the Committee's concerns, and assure you that my intention is to provide full and frank information to support the Committee's scrutiny role. There were discussions between my officials and the Clerk to the Committee in the run up to the February session about the level and detail of the information expected, and there appear to have been failures in communication on both sides. To avoid any possible repetition, I will expect an in depth meeting to take place between my officials and the Committee staff ahead of the next scrutiny session in the summer.

Information on the European Union decision on Glastir spend

The European Commission have now confirmed their position on spend in 2014 and 2015 for Glastir. All agreements in place by 31st December 2013 will be able to continue to be funded under the current Rural Development Plan (RDP) until 31st December 2015, providing that they are amended to fit with new rules governing the next RDP. Any agreements signed after 31st December 2013 are currently expected to be funded from the successor RDP.

Transitional arrangements are still to be agreed, as are the regulations governing the successor plan. As yet it is too early to be able to identify the impact of CAP Reform on the existing agreements.

My officials are working with Defra, other UK administrations and the European Commission in order to identify the level of spend that will be realised under the current RDP and the effect of new rules as a result of CAP Reform. A full evaluation of RDP allocations is being carried out to ensure that Wales can gain maximum benefit from European funding under the current plan.

Marine Conservation Zones

Defra's Marine Conservation Zone (MCZ) work remains at an early stage. The initial consultation concludes at the end of March. It is too early to determine whether or not Defra will actually seek to implement MCZs within the Welsh Zone or, if they do, the extent to which fishing would be affected within any MCZ. My officials have had preliminary discussions with Defra regarding the principle of enforcement and impacts of displacement fishing activity within the Welsh zone. Discussions will intensify when Defra's plans become clearer.

Transitional European Union measures on direct payments and RDP under CAP

The negotiations on the reform of the CAP are still in progress and it will not be possible to complete work on transitional arrangements until the new regulations are in a more complete state. Nevertheless, the Welsh Government has worked with other UK administrations and put forward our views of the elements that required to be addressed in the transition. In particular this includes clarity on the eligible dates for new commitments and payments under the RDP, funding arrangements for both Single Farm Payments and the RDP, and arrangements for modulation of funding between the EAGF and EAFRD funds.

Impact on Programme for Government targets of access to Glastir Advanced for current Tir Gofal farmers

Following the offer of transitional arrangements to Tir Gofal farmers in 2009, most agreement holders will exit that scheme at the same time. The Welsh Government is committed to targeting the new Glastir Advanced scheme on farms that offer the best potential for environmental delivery. Tir Gofal participants who have applied to enter Glastir will therefore compete on an equal platform to seek a Glastir Advanced contract. Of those existing Tir Gofal farms eligible for scoring under Glastir Advanced, nearly 800 were selected for inclusion in the Glastir Advanced scheme for 2014, and around 200 more placed on the reserve list. The remaining 2,000 Tir Gofal farms will continue to be considered for selection in Glastir Advanced for future years subject to them joining Glastir Entry and expressing an interest in the Advanced scheme. A further selection for Glastir

2015 will be made in the autumn and we envisage selecting a similar number, subject to provisions being available under new Rural Development Regulations.

The impact of the reduction of a high level agri-environment scheme on notified areas such as SSSI and SACs will be limited as the cross compliance requirements and the Whole Farm Code of Glastir Entry will provide protection of these habitats. Farmers not joining Glastir Advanced can maintain or enhance the environmental benefits made on their farms under Tir Gofal by choosing complementary options as part of their Glastir Entry application. The Glastir Advanced scoring system gives consideration to protected sites, contributing to the score and improving the chances of selection, thus prioritising these areas for selection into Glastir Advanced.

Delivery of the Committee's Glastir report recommendations

I am attaching, at Annexes A, B and C, a full response to each of the ten Recommendations along with details of the Glastir Drop-In Surgeries and On Farm events.

I trust that this information addresses the concerns raised by the Committee and I assure you that the information provided in advance of future sessions will be in a far greater depth.

Alun Davies AC / AM

Y Gweinidog Cyfoeth Naturiol a Bwyd
Minister for Natural Resources and Food

Recommendation 1

A communication plan has been produced and the communications programme for Glastir is being rolled out as outlined under Recommendation 2 below.

Recommendation 2

Welsh Government is now producing a 4-page Glastir section in each edition of Gwlad. Articles covered to date include practical and technical advice, case studies and key dates.

Glastir Drop-in Surgeries began in February and Glastir On-farm events will commence at the end of April.

The monthly Farming Connect bulletin now contains a Glastir section providing the key messages.

Closer working partnership with the farming unions have resulted in our drop-in surgeries being promoted on the union's web pages.

Recommendation 3

I have asked my officials to assess the attendance levels during the Drop-in Surgeries and On-farm events and to evaluate the support given. As noted in my response to your enquiry, a further assessment of the options selected and the reasons for poor uptake of any individual options will be undertaken at the end of the year.

Recommendation 4

The details of the drop-in surgeries were published in the January/February edition of Gwlad. Details of the on-farm events have been published in the March/April edition of Gwlad. I attached the schedule for both the Drop-in surgeries (as Annex B) and the On-farm events (as Annex C) for your benefit.

Recommendation 5

I have already submitted to the committee the outcomes of the review in to recordkeeping.

Recommendation 6

The method for paying capital works is being explained to potential applicants at the Drop-in Surgeries and will form part of the On-farm events. An article is being drafted for the May/June edition of Gwlad. The May/June edition is considered the most suitable to publish as we expect the interest to increase as the July cut-off point becomes closer.

Recommendation 7

I have not made any arrangement to review the payment rates.

Recommendation 8

Further to my original response to the Committee, I am seeking further clarification on the new Rural Development Regulations and the effect of

'Greening' of direct payments before I consider any changes to the payment mechanism.

Recommendation 9

Following a series of stakeholder meetings and a SWOT analysis of the current forestry situation, both of which have informed the work of the RDP Advisory Group, chaired by Peter Davies, Forestry Commission Wales and, from April 2013, Natural Resources Wales, have been instructed to develop proposals for a forestry grant scheme to be supported under the next Rural Development Plan for Wales 2014 to 2020. A working group, comprising Welsh Government and FCW/NRW officials, as well as forestry sector stakeholders representing a cross-section of forestry interests, has been set up to take this work forward to ensure Wales has a comprehensive suite of woodland support schemes.

Recommendation 10

Once there is clarification on CAP pillar 1 regulations and payments and the new Rural Development Regulations, I will consult with stakeholders before making any changes to Glastir.
