Dear David

COMMITTEE INQUIRY: MAKING LAWS IN THE FOURTH ASSEMBLY

Following my recent study on the regulatory impact assessment of the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Bill, and given the relevance of cost estimates to informed law making, I thought it might be helpful to your Committee if I shared some reflections on the financial content of the Explanatory Memoranda for Assembly Bills. I enclose a short paper that summarises a review of the Explanatory Memoranda. As you will see, the paper identifies two main issues: lack of clarity in the presentation of cost estimates and variations in the completeness of estimates. It also suggests some potential solutions.

I should be happy to provide further explanation if the Committee would find that helpful.

Yours sincerely

HUW VAUGHAN THOMAS
AUDITOR GENERAL FOR WALES

Enc: The Financial Content of Explanatory Memoranda for Assembly Bills

THE FINANCIAL CONTENT OF EXPLANATORY MEMORANDA FOR ASSEMBLY BILLS

1. In order to support wider work on contributing to National Assembly consultations on Assembly Bills, the WAO's Compliance Section has undertaken a brief review of the financial content of the Explanatory Memoranda that have accompanied Assembly Bills since November 2011.
2. Two main findings arise from the review:
 - a. a general lack of clarity in the presentation of estimates of costs and timescales within Explanatory Memoranda regarding the proposed legislation;
 - b. variations in the completeness of estimates of costs, leading to a lack of an overall view of the cost of the legislation
3. This paper explains these findings and suggests some potential means of addressing them.

Lack of clarity of estimates of costs and timescales within Explanatory Memoranda

4. Standing Order 26.6 requires the Member in charge of a Bill to lay an Explanatory Memorandum to accompany the Bill. Standing Order 26.6 (vi) requires the Explanatory Memorandum to set out:

...best estimates of:

 - (a) the gross administrative, compliance and other costs to which the provisions of the Bill would give rise;
 - (b) the timescales over which such costs would be expected to arise; and
 - (c) on whom the costs would fall...
5. This requirement is entirely appropriate, given that the Assembly does not just make laws but also determines overall how much money the Welsh Government and other relevant bodies can spend on particular purposes. Clearly, the Assembly needs information on the expected costs that arise from its legislation if it is to legislate responsibly and for the overall benefit of the people of Wales.
6. The Explanatory Memoranda are all quite extensive documents containing sections labelled "Costs and Benefits". In most cases, those sections together with supporting annexes run to some 30 pages. Yet the information required by Standing Order 26.6(vi) is usually not readily apparent. Much relevant information is provided, but even for a Bill of limited scope, the reader has to do a fair amount of work to arrive at an overall understanding of the estimates of (a) the costs, (b) the timescales and (c) on whom the costs would fall.

7. Examples of this include:
 - a. The Qualifications Wales Bill Explanatory Memorandum—this provides a table that, at first reading, could be taken to summarise the costs of the Bill (Table 4 on page 56). However, in order to identify the real cost of the Bill, the totals in Table 1 (on page 52) must be subtracted from the totals in Table 4. The need for this is only evident from a careful reading of para 228, which says, “the highest costs shown relate to staffing costs which, for functional staff, are largely already met from Welsh Government budgets”. Table 4 also does not have a title to make clear what it is setting out, although its position in the text indicates that it is the costs of “option 3”, which is elsewhere indicated as the option pursued by the Bill. And to find the table requires the reader to consider most of the Costs and Benefits section of the Memorandum. The five year period for costs is also not explained, which could lead to an inference that costs will only be incurred for five years, unlikely though that may seem.
 - b. The Renting Homes (Wales) Bill Explanatory Memorandum—this identifies costs for 2015-16 to 2019-20 for the Welsh Government, private landlords, community landlords, third sector organisations and legal professionals. It considers these costs in some detail not just in terms of the option represented by the Bill but also in terms of an alternative option, as well giving some cost consideration to the “do nothing option”. Consequently, the cost information covers 27 pages, and unfortunately there is no summary table to encapsulate the estimated cost of the Bill. Again, a five year costing is given without explanation.
 - c. The Higher Education (Wales) Bill Explanatory Memorandum—this provides extensive cost analysis for three options. The 36 page “Costs and benefits” section provides 22 tables, and, as a result, table 8, which provides an estimate of the cost of the Bill from 2015-16 to 2019-20, is rather lost in the detail.
8. As indicated by these examples, the cost information provided in Explanatory Memoranda is in practice set out as part of an analysis of options, with such options generally including “do nothing”, “introduce legislation” (ie introduce legislation as per the Bill) and often a mid-way or enhanced variation on this. The complex and inconsistent layout means that the reader needs to exercise considerable care to avoid confusing costs that are attributable to other options with those attributable to the Bill as introduced.
9. Such detailed option analysis is not strictly required by Standing Order 26.6, though it is relevant to Standing Order 26.6(iii), which requires the Explanatory Memoranda to:

...set out whether alternative ways of achieving the policy objectives were considered and, if so, why the approach taken in the Bill was adopted...

10. It therefore appears that, as the detail of the option analysis that meets Standing Order 26.6(iii) provides material that is relevant to requirements of Standing Order 26.6(vi), those who draft Explanatory Memoranda consider that Standing Order 26.6(vi) is adequately met by such option analysis. However, it is arguable that even where such option analysis does contain all the relevant estimates, this is not a satisfactory approach because of the considerable burden it places on the reader, as explained above. It risks creating confusion amongst AMs when considering Bills and hampers effective scrutiny.
11. Given the importance of Assembly Members being informed of the cost of legislation, it is a matter of some concern that identifying the estimates of costs, timescales and those on whom costs fall in respect of individual Assembly Acts and Bills from looking at the Explanatory Memoranda laid before the Assembly is not straightforward. One solution to this problem would be amendment of Standing Order 26.6(vi) so as to provide greater clarity. Such an amendment could specifically require the completion of a table summarising the estimates of (a) the costs of the legislation, (b) the timescales for those costs and (c) on whom the costs would fall. Such a table, in a standard format, should enable all AMs to be clear about the main cost implications of each Bill that they vote on. A potential template is set out in the Annex to this paper.
12. As indicated in the Annex, given the recent passage of the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Bill, it might also be appropriate for there to be an additional cell to summarise the environmental and social dis-benefits that cannot be quantified financially. However, this would require an addition to the list of items currently contained in Standing Order 26.6(vi).
13. Though in some cases it might be appropriate to include a summary table for each main policy/Part of a Bill, in any event it would be helpful to have one overall summarising table for each Bill as a whole.

Variations in the completeness of estimates of costs

14. Explanatory Memoranda frequently say that estimates cannot be made for some effects of the legislation, and, as a consequence, no figures are given for those effects. It is certainly the case that it can be difficult to provide estimates when, for example, the level of take-up of a new programme is not known. However, the complete omission of any costing for some effects alongside the provision of detailed figures for other aspects (those that can be relatively easily estimated) can lead to a rather misleading picture of the overall costs of the legislation.
15. For example, the costing set out in the Explanatory Memorandum for the Local Government (Wales) Bill of January 2015 does not give a full overview of the likely gross or net costs of the Bill. This is not because of the understandable uncertainty about the future shape of local government in Wales, but because rather than clearly allowing for that uncertainty the Memorandum gives partial and not well-signposted information:

- a. Appendix A on page 104 of the Memorandum has the title “Costing the Options” but appears to be confined solely to the (relatively modest) cost of transition committees;
 - b. Tables 17 and 18 on pages 96 and 97 could be taken to summarise Welsh Government and local government costs, but para 208 on page 95 says “there are a few areas (notably policy intention 4) where it has not been possible to produce an estimate at this stage”;
 - c. The tables give the total additional costs for the Welsh Government and Local Government for the period 2015-16 to 2020-21 as £1.1 million and £1.2 million respectively (i.e. £2.3 million in total) on the basis of one voluntary merger. However, the Bill appears to provide complete primary legislative provision for voluntary mergers, and it would therefore be appropriate for the Explanatory Memorandum to give broad cost estimates for one or more such voluntary mergers (with the uncertainty noted);
 - d. The Memorandum provides no figures for an estimate of ongoing savings.
16. It is worth noting that, in contrast, the Assembly’s Research Service paper on the Local Government (Wales) Bill includes far more comprehensive cost estimates for local government restructuring overall. The Research Service paper refers to Chartered Institute of Public Finance & Accountancy (CIPFA) estimates for the transition costs of local government mergers (in terms of people, property, systems and programme costs) that range between £159.7 million and £267.9 million for nine mergers involving 19 authorities (and annual savings of £64.7 million a year after two or three years).
17. While not included in either CIPFA’s report or the Research Service paper, this would indicate broad brush costs of some £20 million for one merger (and annual savings of some £6 million). This indicates that the Explanatory Memorandum probably rather understates the likely initial cost, while also omitting to provide a figure for ongoing savings.
18. The Auditor General’s Review of the Regulatory Impact Assessment of the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Bill (4 December 2014), concluded that there was likely cost understatement within the Explanatory Memorandum, and that it did not present the estimates clearly enough. Furthermore, the Welsh Government’s view that the additional costs of the bill may need to be absorbed within existing resources, as expressed during the Environment and Sustainability Committee’s evidence session on 29 September 2014, was not made clear in the Explanatory Memorandum.
19. As the examples above show, there is a tendency for Explanatory Memoranda to provide an incomplete view of overall costs. To be fit for purpose, i.e. so that Assembly Members have an overall idea of the cost of the legislation, Explanatory Memoranda should give overall estimates of the costs. Clearly, this can be difficult for some effects, but it would also be more meaningful and useful for Explanatory Memoranda to give an overall broad brush estimate of a Bill’s gross cost (while acknowledging areas of considerable uncertainty) than to provide very detailed figures on certain aspects but no overall estimate.

20. The current formulation of Standing Order 26.6 (vi) perhaps does not help ensure that an overall view of costs is given. The Standing Order requires the Explanatory Memorandum to set out "...best estimates of...the gross administrative, compliance and other costs to which the provisions of the Bill would give rise", but it does not specifically require the identification of such costs overall. It would seem relatively straightforward to include such a requirement in the Standing Order.
21. In order to improve the reasonableness of overall cost estimation it may be helpful for the Assembly to undertake or obtain some retrospective reviews of the actual costs arising against the estimates given in the relevant Explanatory Memorandum. Such reviews might well help identify some means of improving the cost estimation processes and presentation used. Another approach that might help ensure that Explanatory Memoranda include appropriate cost information would be for Standing Order 26.6 to require the inclusion of some form of certification that this is the case, as this would help AMs better understand the overall costs of the legislation they are being asked to vote on.

Agenda Item 3

Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee
Statutory Instruments with Clear Reports
18 May 2015

CLA530 – The Regulation of Private Rented Housing (Training Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2015

Procedure: Affirmative

This Order is made under sections 19(2)(b), 19(3), 46 and 142 of the Housing (Wales) Act 2014 (“the Act”).

The Regulations provide that a licensing authority for the purposes of Part 1 of the Act may authorise a training provider and approve a course for the purposes of delivering training. The Regulations also provide for requirements in relation to the training to be specified.

CLA531 – The Smoke-free Premises etc. (Wales) (Amendment) Regulations 2015

Procedure: Affirmative

The Smoke-free Premises etc. (Wales) Regulations 2007 currently make provision concerning the prohibition of smoking in certain premises and vehicles. These 2015 Regulations amend the 2007 Regulations by adding private vehicles to the list of smoke-free places when: (i) the vehicle is enclosed, (ii) more than one person is in the vehicle, and (iii) a person under the age of 18 is in the vehicle.

There are specific exceptions relating to aircraft, ships, hovercraft, caravans and motorhomes.

It will become an offence to smoke in a private vehicle with someone under the age of 18 present. It will also become an offence for a driver to fail to prevent smoking in a private vehicle with someone under the age of 18 present.

Criminal liability for offences can be discharged by payment of a fixed penalty notice of £50 (reduced to £30 if paid within 15 days).

Agenda Item 4.1

Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee Draft Report CLA

Title: The National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2015

This Order in Council is made under section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 (“GOWA 2006”). Section 16 of GOWA 2006 identifies a number of persons who may not be members of the Assembly. Additionally, it provides for an Order in Council to designate further offices and employments, the holders of which would also be disqualified from becoming members of the Assembly. This Order may only be made by Her Majesty in Council, if a draft has been laid before, and approved by, a resolution of the Assembly

In addition, this Order revokes The National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2010 (SI 2010/2969).

Procedure: Affirmative

Technical Scrutiny

No points are identified for reporting under Standing Order 21.2 in respect of this instrument.

Merits Scrutiny

The following points are identified for reporting under Standing Order 21.3(ii) in respect of this instrument as being of political or legal importance or giving rise to issues of public policy likely to be of interest to the Assembly.

1. The Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee reported on its inquiry (“the Committee’s inquiry”) into the Disqualification from Membership of the National Assembly for Wales) in July 2014. Paragraph 11 of the Welsh Government’s response (“the response”) referred to

“the list of disqualifying offices is derived from several sources (GOWA 2006, the Disqualification Order in force at the time, together with any relevant provisions made by extant Assembly legislation)” and “given these various sources for disqualification provisions, it may be extremely difficult for any potential candidate to be sure that he or she has not inadvertently infringed any of the prohibitions.....”

2 In order to deal with this point the Government's response at paragraph 12 states;

"In addition, therefore, to bringing forward a new draft Disqualification Order in 2015, the Welsh Government intends, working as necessary with the Electoral Commission, to produce a comprehensive, non-statutory, list of all of the disqualifying provisions of which we are aware, from whatever source, and make it publicly available to parties and potential candidates".

3. Further, this Order was drafted on the basis of the Welsh Government's criteria set after its consideration of the Committee's inquiry report and recommendations for determining the offices which should be listed in the draft Order. The criteria were derived from the following principles, highlighted in recommendation 1 of Committee's inquiry report :

Principle 1: Promoting democratic participation and the right to stand as an Assembly Member are paramount.

Principle 2: Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales should be restricted to as few citizens as possible.

Principle 3: Political activity is inappropriate for some citizens in order to:

- i. protect the independence of the electoral process;
- ii. prevent conflicts of interest arising on election; and
- iii. protect certain public offices from political bias.

Principle 4: The following citizens should be affected by a disqualification order:

- i. those whose role involves an over-riding requirement for impartiality,
- ii. including those whose responsibilities include the electoral process itself;
- iii. those who hold any public office which carries with it a significant financial benefit from the Welsh Government;
- iv. those who hold public office and in that role provide formal advice to the Welsh Government;
- v. those who hold any public office which is subject to scrutiny by the Assembly.

Principle 5: Where disqualifications are necessary they must be:

- i. in line with these principles;
- ii. clear and unambiguous;
- iii. proportionate.

4. The Committee welcomes the reduction in the number of disqualifying offices compared with the 2010 Order, in line with its recommendation that disqualification should be restricted to as few citizens as possible.

5. The Committee strongly welcomes the fact that this Order is to be made bilingually, unlike the 2010 Order that it replaces. The formatting, however, is unusual since it adopts neither the column format normally used for Statutory Instruments, nor the facing page approach used for Acts of the Assembly. This Order has been prepared with the full-width English text preceding the Welsh, both in the Order and the Schedule.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Order)

This Order designates the persons who are disqualified from being a member of the National Assembly for Wales. The bodies and offices are described in the Schedule to this Order.

This Order does not contain a definitive list of disqualifying offices and memberships (see in particular section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006).

This Order revokes the previous Order made in 2010.

NODYN ESBONIADOL

Explanatory Memorandum to the National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2015

This Explanatory Memorandum has been prepared by the Permanent Secretary's Department and is laid before the National Assembly for Wales in conjunction with the above subordinate legislation and in accordance with Standing Order 27.1

Minister's Declaration

In my view, this Explanatory Memorandum gives a fair and reasonable view of the expected impact of the National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2015

Carwyn Jones
First Minister of Wales
1 April 2015

Description

1. This draft Order designates certain offices as offices which disqualify their holders from being Assembly Members. While the Welsh Government believes that disqualification from Assembly membership should be restricted to as few citizens as possible, we recognise that political activity is inappropriate for the holders of certain offices. In particular, there is a need to protect certain public offices from political bias, and to ensure that the independence of the electoral process is upheld.

Matters of special interest to the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee

2. The draft Order takes account of the recommendations made by the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee's 'Inquiry into the Disqualification from Membership of the National Assembly for Wales' report, published on 30 July 2014, and the Welsh Government's response to that report, issued on 22 October 2014.
3. The Committee's report set out the principles which it considered should inform who should be disqualified from membership of the National Assembly for Wales, and made specific recommendations on the content of the next order specifying disqualifications from Assembly membership. The Welsh Government's response explained that we agree with the overall thrust of the Committee's report, and with the majority of the Committee's specific recommendations.
4. The Welsh Government also agreed to consult on the content of the next order specifying disqualifications from Assembly membership, in good time to allow the next order to be in place before the next Assembly election. That consultation was carried out between 14 January and 11 March 2015, and the draft Order takes account of the outcome of that consultation.

Legislative background

5. This draft instrument is a draft Order in Council to be made under section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 ("GOWA 2006").
6. Section 16 of GOWA 2006 identifies a number of persons who may not be members of the Assembly. Additionally, it provides for an Order in Council to designate further offices and employments, the holders of which would also be disqualified from becoming members of the Assembly. Such an Order may only be made by Her Majesty in Council, if a draft has been laid before, and approved by, a resolution of the Assembly.

Purpose & intended effect of the legislation

7. Ahead of each election to the National Assembly for Wales an Order in Council under section 16 of GOWA 2006 is made, that specifies offices whose holders are disqualified from Assembly Membership.
8. At present, the National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2010 is still in force, therefore persons holding any of the offices specified in the 2010 Order are disqualified from Assembly membership.
9. The intended effect of this draft Order, therefore, is to revoke the 2010 Order, and set out an updated list of disqualifying offices in good time before the next Assembly election in May 2016.
10. Its purpose is to disqualify the holders of certain offices from Assembly membership where this is necessary to protect the independence of the electoral process, prevent conflicts of interest, or to protect particular public offices from political bias.
11. After considering the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee's detailed report and recommendations, the Welsh Government set out its criteria for determining the offices which should be listed in the draft Order. These criteria were published in the Welsh Government's consultation on the draft Order. The criteria are set out below, and are derived from the principles set out in recommendation 1 of the Committee's report of July 2014, the specific recommendations for disqualifying posts in recommendation 12 of that report, and the Welsh Government's views on disqualification of public staff as set out in its report of October 2014:
12. General principles, as set out in recommendation 1 of the Committee's report:
 - Principle 1: Promoting democratic participation and the right to stand as an Assembly Member are paramount.
 - Principle 2: Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales should be restricted to as few citizens as possible.
 - Principle 3: Political activity is inappropriate for some citizens in order to:
 - i. protect the independence of the electoral process;
 - ii. prevent conflicts of interest arising on election; and
 - iii. protect certain public offices from political bias.
 - Principle 4: The following citizens should be affected by a disqualification order:
 - i. those whose role involves an over-riding requirement for impartiality,
 - ii. including those whose responsibilities include the electoral process itself;

- iii. those who hold any public office which carries with it a significant financial benefit from the Welsh Government;
- iv. those who hold public office and in that role provide formal advice to the Welsh Government;
- v. those who hold any public office which is subject to scrutiny by the Assembly.

Principle 5: Where disqualifications are necessary they must be:

- i. in line with these principles;
- ii. clear and unambiguous;
- iii. proportionate.

13. The offices described in recommendation 12 should be disqualified, and should be included in the Disqualification Order unless they are already disqualified under section 16 of GOWA 2006.
14. Members of judicial tribunals should be disqualified.
15. Normally, persons appointed by Welsh Ministers should be disqualified, but there may be instances where such persons should not be disqualified (in which case consideration of the five principles referred to above will be important).
16. Public staff as described in recommendation 13 (e.g. staff of National Park, Police, Fire and Rescue Authorities, staff of Welsh Government Sponsored Bodies) should not be disqualified – it can be safely assumed such staff would give up their employment if elected, as continuing with employment at the same time as discharging Assembly Member responsibilities would make impossible demands on the individual.

Consultation

17. On the 14 January 2015, the Welsh Government issued a consultation on the draft National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2015. This consultation sought views on which offices should be included in that order. The consultation closed on the 11 March 2015, which allowed an eight week consultation period. As well as being publicly available on the Welsh Government website, offices that were listed for disqualification under the draft Order were contacted, to ensure they had the opportunity to give their views on whether they deemed their inclusion in the Order appropriate, and whether there were any other offices that they considered should be included.
18. Eight substantive responses were received to the consultation. Most of these responses were from bodies who confirmed they were content with the proposed disqualification of the offices listed in the draft Order which were relevant to them. One response noted that members of the Employment Tribunal were not included in the draft Order, and suggested they should be. We agreed that, based on the criteria outlined at paragraph 12-16 above, members of Employment Tribunals and the Employment Appeal Tribunal should be disqualified, and these have now been included in the draft Order.

19. An analysis of the consultation responses is available as part of the Welsh Government's response to the consultation, published on the Welsh Government website at

<http://gov.wales/consultations/finance/disqualification-order/?status=closed&lang=en>

Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA)

20. The Welsh Ministers' Code of Practice on the carrying out of Regulatory Impact Assessments was considered in relation to this Order. As a result, it was not considered necessary to carry out a regulatory impact assessment as to the likely costs and benefits of complying with the Order.
21. This Order has no impact on the statutory duties of Welsh Ministers relating to equality of opportunity (section 77 of GOWA 2006), the Welsh language (section 78 GOWA), or sustainable development (section 79 GOWA 2006), and will have no impact on the local government, voluntary sector or business schemes under section 73, 74 and 75 of GOWA 2006 respectively.

Summary

In 2011, two Members elected to the National Assembly were disqualified after it emerged that they were members of public bodies that serving AMs cannot belong to.

One did not regain his seat after it was found that he had not checked the relevant rules for candidates. The other was reinstated after it was established that he had received out-of-date advice.

The events opened up the debate about what bodies elected members could be part of and, if a member was part of an organisation not allowed under the rules, when that connection should be severed.

In 2014 the First Minister asked the National Assembly's Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee to consider carrying out an inquiry into the rules concerning disqualification of members.

The Committee found that there are complications between part of the Government of Wales Act 2006, which deals with disqualification, and the National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007, which deals with aspects of electoral law.

Currently, the disqualification from becoming an Assembly Member becomes relevant when candidate is nominated for election. At this point, according to the 2007 Order, a candidate should not be part of, or a member of, any organisations on long lists set out in the 2006 Act and the relevant Disqualification Order made under it..

But in this regard the 2007 Order effectively pre-empts the 2006 Act, which states that disqualification takes effect when Members are elected.

So, under the Act, a candidate need not resign from their positions until just before they are elected. Under the Order they must resign not knowing whether they will be elected, leaving some candidates facing the prospect of unemployment should they lose.

The Committee has suggested how the legislation can be changed to not only remove the complications but also ensure that the events following the 2011 election are not repeated.

The solution is not a simple one, as it requires amendments to both primary and secondary legislation (Acts and Regulations), and the powers to make these changes are shared between the UK Parliament and the Assembly.

To overcome this problem the Committee has identified changes that, it believes, should be made in time for the next Assembly general election in 2016, and for the subsequent one in 2021.

One of the Committee's main recommendations, which probably cannot be in place until the 2021 election, would require amending the Government of Wales Act 2006.

The changes would mean that disqualification from membership of the Assembly should take effect on taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance as an Assembly Member, subject to a few exceptions because of the nature of the jobs being undertaken.

The Committee believes this would be a significant change that would enable more people to stand for election because they will not have to give up their employment to do so.

The change could be achieved in one of two ways - by requiring Assembly Members to resign a disqualifying post before taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance, or by deeming an Assembly Member to have resigned a disqualifying post on being elected.

The Committee suggests that the Law Commission investigate and report on this issue as part of a wider review across all UK legislatures.

The Committee didn't feel it was in a position to list definitively the public bodies and officeholders that should be the subject of future disqualification orders, but has nevertheless provided an indication of those it thinks should be included.

In light of evidence it received, the Committee also considered the issue of holding more than one political post in respect of the roles of Assembly Member and local councillor, and Assembly Member and Member of the House of Lords.

In the case of the former, it believes further investigation is required.

However, the Committee does believe there is a clearer case for prohibiting individuals from standing as an Assembly Member and being a Member of the House of Lords, although such a ban should not apply to anyone who is currently serving as a member of both institutions.

The Committee's Recommendations

Recommendation 1. we recommend that the following principles, or ones similar to them, should inform who should be disqualified from membership of the National Assembly for Wales:

Principle 1: Promoting democratic participation and the right to stand as an Assembly Member are paramount.

Principle 2: Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales should be restricted to as few citizens as possible.

Principle 3: Political activity is inappropriate for some citizens in order to:

- i. protect the independence of the electoral process;
- ii. prevent conflicts of interest arising on election; and
- iii. protect certain public offices from political bias.

Principle 4: The following citizens should be affected by a disqualification order:

- i. those whose role involves an over-riding requirement for impartiality, including those whose responsibilities include the electoral process itself;
- ii. those who hold any public office which carries with it a significant financial benefit from the Welsh Government;
- iii. those who hold public office and in that role provide formal advice to the Welsh Government;
- iv. those who hold any public office which is subject to scrutiny by the Assembly.

Principle 5: Where disqualifications are necessary they must be:

- i. in line with these principles;
- ii. clear and unambiguous;
- iii. proportionate.

Recommendation 2. we recommend that the UK Government brings forward appropriate legislation to amend the Government of Wales Act 2006 to provide that disqualification from a particular public office should take effect on taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance as an Assembly Member. This change should not apply to a very limited number of posts—as specified in section 16 of the 2006 Act or by order—where being a candidate would, for example, give rise to a conflict of interest or appear to undermine impartiality. (Page 38)

Recommendation 3. we recommend that the UK Government brings forward appropriate legislation to remove the relevant provisions in The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007 requiring candidates, when accepting nomination, to declare that to the best of their knowledge and belief, they do not hold a disqualifying office. (Page 39)

Recommendation 4. we recommend that the Welsh and UK Governments ask the Law Commission to investigate and report on the various legislative options for delivering recommendation 2, and to make a recommendation on what it would consider to be the most appropriate, potentially as part of a wider review of this issue across all UK legislatures. (Page 40)

Recommendation 5. we recommend that the UK Government amends section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 to ensure that any disqualifications it contains are set out fully rather than by reference to other legislation and that all disqualifications it specifies take effect on nomination. (Page 40)

Recommendation 6. we recommend that the the UK Government amends section 16(1) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 to remove the Auditor General and Public Services Ombudsman for Wales, so that they may be included in an appropriate disqualification order with other offices. (Page 40)

Recommendation 7. we recommend that the UK Government amends section 16(4) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 so that a person who holds office as lord-lieutenant, lieutenant or high sheriff should be disqualified from being an Assembly Member. (Page 41)

Recommendation 8. we recommend that the Welsh and UK Governments, in asking the Law Commission to investigate and report in line with recommendation 4, also include a requirement to advise on the implications of retaining, replacing or removing section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006. (Page 41)

Recommendation 9. we recommend that any future legislative change to section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 should only proceed following consultation with, and the consent of, the National Assembly for Wales. (Page 42)

Recommendation 10. we recommend that the order for the 2016 Assembly general election should specify two categories of persons who should be disqualified:

Category 1: those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role.

Category 2: those who should be disqualified from return as an Assembly Member. (Page 48)

Recommendation 11. we recommend that the order for the 2021 Assembly general election should specify two categories of persons who should be disqualified:

Category 1: those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role.

Category 2: those who should be disqualified having been elected but only from taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance. (Page 48)

Recommendation 12. we recommend that an order drafted for the 2016 Assembly general election to disqualify persons from nomination as an Assembly Member should include (but not necessarily be limited to) the following:

Auditor General for Wales
Children's Commissioner for Wales
Civil Service Commissioner
Commissioner for Equality and Human Rights
Commissioner for Older People in Wales
Commissioner for Public Appointments
Comptroller and Auditor General
Her Majesty's Chief inspector of Education and Training in Wales
Local Government Boundary Commissioner for Wales
Members of the Independent Remuneration Panel for Wales
Members and Staff of the Electoral Commission
Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration
Returning Officers and local authority staff involved in the electoral process

Statutory deputies of the persons in this list
Welsh Language Commissioner (Page 49)

Recommendation 13. we recommend that an order should be drafted for the 2016 Assembly general election that disqualifies the following persons on return as an Assembly Member:

Members of judicial tribunals
Persons appointed by Welsh Ministers
Staff of local authorities not included in category 1
Staff of National Park, Police, Fire and Rescue Authorities
Staff of the organisations referred to in category 1
Staff of Welsh Government Sponsored Public Bodies (Page 50)

Recommendation 14. we recommend that, in preparing a disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election, the Welsh Government consults widely on its contents, including in particular, all those organisations that it covers. (Page 51)

Recommendation 15. we recommend that the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election is drafted, consulted on and made no later than 12 months before the date of that election. (Page 51)

Recommendation 16. we recommend that the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election is made bilingually in the Privy Council. (Page 51)

Recommendation 17. we recommend that every public body in Wales reviews its rules governing political activities to ensure that all staff are clear about the internal rules that apply in the event that they wish to seek nomination for, and are eventually successful in, election to the National Assembly for Wales. Such rules should take account of any legislation that arises from this report and be subject to review at least 2 years before Assembly general elections that take place after 2016. (Page 56)

Recommendation 18. we recommend that the Welsh Government reviews the terms of appointment and guidance it gives to appointees, sponsored bodies and other relevant bodies regarding political activity. (Page 57)

Recommendation 19. we recommend that the Electoral Commission reviews its existing guidance on disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales to ensure it is comprehensive and covers all of the relevant policy issues and legislation that apply.

Recommendation 20. we recommend that the Welsh Government commissions an independent review of the feasibility of holding a dual mandate as an Assembly Member, and local authority councillor (including having regard to: the potential for conflicts of interest, time commitments involved and issues of public perception) and to make recommendations.

Recommendation 21. we recommend that the UK Government prohibits the practice of standing as an Assembly Member and a Member of the House of Lords, but that such a prohibition should not be applied to anyone who is currently serving as a member of both institutions.

(Page 67)

1. Introduction

The Committee's remit

1. The remit of the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee (“the Committee”) is to carry out the functions of the responsible committee set out in Standing Order 21 and to consider any other constitutional or governmental matter within or relating to the competence of the Assembly or Welsh Ministers.
2. Within this, the Committee considers the political and legal importance and technical aspects of all statutory instruments or draft statutory instruments made by the Welsh Ministers and reports on whether the Assembly should pay special attention to the instruments on a range of grounds set out in Standing Order 21.
3. The Committee also considers and reports on the appropriateness of provisions in Assembly Bills and UK Parliament Bills that grant powers to make subordinate legislation to the Welsh Ministers, the First Minister or the Counsel General.

Terms of reference

4. On 17 February 2014, we agreed to hold an inquiry into disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales. The terms of references were to consider:
 - the principles underpinning the disqualifying posts and employments contained in The National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2010 and, so far as possible, to recommend a new list of disqualifying posts and employments;
 - the timing of when disqualifications take effect;
 - whether disqualification orders should be made by the Privy Council in bilingual form; and
 - any other matters relating to disqualification from being an Assembly Member.
5. The inquiry was prompted following a letter from the First Minister in January 2014 asking us if we would consider carrying out an inquiry into the rules pertaining to disqualification from Assembly membership. A copy of the letter is at Annexe 1.

6. The Welsh Government also provided a memorandum which included the context of the request for us to undertake the inquiry, the content of the disqualification order and incidental issues. The memorandum can be found at Annexe 2 to this report.

7. We issued a call for written evidence on 14 March 2014 and held 7 evidence sessions. Details of the responses received and witnesses who gave evidence can be found at the end of this report.

2. Background and evidence for change

Legislative background

8. The legislation governing disqualification of membership from the National Assembly for Wales is complex and includes the following:

- Sections 16 - 19 of the Government of Wales Act 2006, which sets out the broad legislative framework for disqualification from being an Assembly Member (and, in so doing, draws on the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975).
- The National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2010, (“the 2010 Disqualification Order”) made under section 16(6) of the Government of Wales Act 2006. The 2010 Disqualification Order designates persons who are disqualified from being a member of the National Assembly for Wales. Part 1 of the Order covers “Bodies the members of which are disqualified”, while Part 2 covers “Other disqualifying offices”.
- The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007, made under section 11 of the Government of Wales Act 1998 and the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000. Under rule 9(4)(c)(ii) of Schedule 5 to the 2007 Order, candidates for election to the Assembly are required to declare, to the best of their knowledge and belief, that they are not disqualified from membership. The power in section 11 of the Government of Wales Act 1998 is now contained in section 13 of the Government of Wales Act 2006. Section 13 provides the Secretary of State with a power to, by order, apply or incorporate, with or without modifications or exceptions, any provision of or made under the 2000 Act and other enactments relating to Parliamentary elections.

9. Section B of the written evidence from Keith Bush QC, the former Chief Legal Adviser to the National Assembly, provides a more comprehensive analysis of the legislative framework. It is reproduced as Annexe 3 to this report and he provided further analysis during an oral evidence session.¹

10. Section 23 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 requires all Assembly Members to take the oath of allegiance to HM the Queen, or to make the corresponding affirmation. Until Members have done so, they may not take part in Assembly proceedings (except for the purposes of taking the oath and election of the Presiding Officer and Deputy Presiding Officer) or draw a salary or any other payment. This provision of the 2006 Act is particularly relevant to this report.

Evidence about the existing arrangements

11. Under the current legislative arrangements, the disqualification from becoming an Assembly Member becomes relevant when a candidate is nominated for election.

12. However, as the evidence of Keith Bush QC demonstrates, there are complications between the Government of Wales Act 2006 and the electoral law contained in The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007. Keith Bush QC stated that the requirements of the 2007 Order “bite”:

“... at the time of acceptance of nomination, i.e. the candidate is required to make the declaration on the basis of the position at that date, which is anomalous, since GOWA 2006 only requires that a candidate is not disqualified when returned. If, therefore, a candidate is aware of a disqualification which exists at the time of nomination, he or she must not accept nomination unless the disqualification has already been removed, e.g. by resigning from the office prior to accepting nomination.

“So, in practice, the disqualification “takes effect” not when a disqualified candidate is elected but when a candidate accepts nomination, although, perversely, a candidate who is unaware of a disqualification has a further period of grace, ending when the return is submitted, to divest himself or herself of the disqualifying office.”²

13. We also heard from a number of witnesses about the lack of clarity of the legislation, particularly surrounding the 2010 Disqualification Order.

² Written Evidence DQ 6

14. The Electoral Commission told us that the 2010 Disqualification Order:

“... is long, and it tends to get longer, because the list of bodies tends to be added to. They are usually removed only if the organisation no longer exists. So ... potentially, the net is quite wide. Also, it is not clear what criteria have been applied ... someone simply looking at the Order could not tell what the criteria are. It is not particularly transparent.”³

15. The Chief Executive⁴ of Natural Resources Wales said:

“I must admit that, having never looked into this issue before your inquiry, until I read the Order, I had not fully realised that it affected board members and staff ... Also, I had not appreciated that it affects the nomination period as well as the actual election period. I think that the Electoral Commission makes both of these points. I agree with it; on the first reading, that was not clear to me. So, I think that they are unclear.”⁵

16. The Older People’s Commissioner for Wales expressed similar sentiments, stating:

“... I had not quite realised that my staff were all barred, which may have been an error on my part. So, on that basis, I would probably say that it is not very clear, because I did not know ... However, it is important, because I need to be clear about the terms and conditions of employment of my staff ... ”⁶

17. Lawyers in Local Government⁷ did not find the existing disqualifications to be unclear,⁸ but highlighted the potential dangers of using a list-based system, namely of missing something out⁹ or of the list becoming out of date.¹⁰

³ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 25], 28 April 2014

⁴ The Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales, Dr Emyr Roberts, indicated during his evidence session that he was representing largely his own views and they had not been discussed by the board or anyone else.

Our view

18. It is clear from all the evidence we have heard that there is a need to reform the legislative framework surrounding disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales, as well as reviewing and revising the 2010 Disqualification Order.

19. Our report therefore includes consideration of:

- the principles that should underpin disqualification from membership of the National Assembly (Chapter 3);
- proposed changes required to the legislative framework (Chapter 4);
- proposed changes to The National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2010 (Chapter 5);
- the timing of the proposed changes (Chapter 6);
- raising awareness about the disqualification rules that apply (Chapter 7).

20. We also heard evidence about the appropriateness of holding more than one political position, so called “double jobbing” and this is considered in Chapter 8.

¹⁰ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 15], 12 May 2014

3. Principles

The right to stand for election

21. The right to stand for election and the desirability of maximising the opportunity to stand for election was a consistent theme of the evidence we received.

22. The First Minister stated in his letter to the committee of 27 January 2014:

“Past disqualification orders have sought to strike a balance in terms of disqualifying posts and employments: allowing as many citizens as possible to stand for election, whilst protecting the legislature from undue influence by government-paid office-holders, protecting the public purse by avoiding conflicts of interests, and protecting the impartiality of certain bodies from the appearance of party political bias.”¹¹

23. The Welsh Government’s memorandum added that:

“Generally speaking, restrictions on membership are a basic feature of elected legislatures. While certain restrictions are necessary, they are a limit on people’s democratic rights. In the Welsh Government’s view, therefore, the rationale behind disqualifying people from Assembly membership must be well justified, and we should restrict exclusions to the minimum.”¹² and concluded:

“...it is our view that the rules pertaining to disqualifications are increasingly unfit for purpose to the point that, in some instances, they pose a disincentive to potential candidates and thus fall foul of the logic of empowering democratic participation.”¹³

¹¹ Letter from the First Minister, Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales, 27 January 2014

¹³ Ibid

24. The Electoral Commission told us that:

“Disqualifications are a limit on people’s freedom to stand for election and indeed limit voters’ choice of as many candidates as possible. So, for that reason, disqualification should be justified and proportionate.”¹⁴

25. In their view:

“Justified and proportionate disqualification criteria should allow the widest possible choice of candidates for electors to choose from, striking a balance between preventing candidacy in limited, specified circumstances, while not unreasonably discouraging participation.”¹⁵

26. The Electoral Commission also told us that following a UK-wide consultation on standing for election the clear message coming through was:

“... the need for the rules to be as simple as they can be, as consistent as they can be, and as straightforward as possible. I am sure that candidates, especially those who do not have access to professional quality advice, think that they are doing something marvellous in standing for election, and it must be like a minefield with lots of things to trip them up along the way.”¹⁶

27. The Electoral Commission’s consultation also found that people consider the disqualifications to be too wide.¹⁷

28. The Electoral Reform Society Wales expressed similar views:

“We would view any kind of restriction on people’s ability to stand for the National Assembly and be Assembly Members as a restriction on their democratic freedom, so keeping those sets of restrictions to an absolute minimum would seem to be the guiding principle, to make it as light touch as possible.”¹⁸

29. We also asked the Older People’s Commissioner for Wales whether the existing rules create any barriers for older people to stand for election. In responding she said:

“I suppose that, at one level, you would have to look at the age profile of the organisations that currently had the bars running through them, and, if they are skewed to one age group, you could argue that that age group is disproportionately affected. The route that I prefer to take, as a human-rights-based commissioner, is more one of inclusion, opportunity and removing barriers for people. I think that there are many, many barriers that people face to go into the world of politics, and into political life, either at national or local level, and, actually, what we should really be focusing on is how to remove those barriers for people.”¹⁹

30. Peter Black AM also emphasised the importance of maximising the ability of people to stand for election, closing his oral evidence by stating:

“In terms of the disqualification rules ... it would be beneficial to Welsh democracy and the Assembly if we made those rules more permissive, rather than less permissive ... It seems to me that the whole point of the Assembly—or one of the rationales behind it—was to increase accountability and transparency and enable people to have a much greater say in terms of their own Government and running affairs in the Assembly. I think that it is important, therefore, in terms of the disqualification rules, that we try to ensure that as many people as possible are able to stand for election to the Assembly.”²⁰

General principles underpinning disqualification rules

31. The Welsh Government’s memorandum (and a subsequent letter from the First Minister²¹) identified the categories of person disqualified as a result of applying the principles referred to in the First Minister’s letter of 27 January 2014 (see paragraph 22). These were:

¹⁹ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 183], 2 June 2014

²⁰ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 64], 2 June 2014

²¹ Letter from the First Minister, Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales, 16 May 2014

- Holders of offices wholly or partly funded by the Welsh Government. This included salaried, pensionable and certain fee-paid posts, but excluded posts attracting expenses only. Office with remuneration of less than £10,000 per year should not normally attract disqualification.
- Appointments which were made, approved or confirmed by the First Minister, Welsh Ministers or the Counsel General, or appointments on which they had a statutory right to be consulted.
- Office holders whose functions would give rise to an unsustainable conflict of interest were they to be elected as Assembly Members.
- Office holders who were not, or were not seen as being, politically impartial.²²

32. The Electoral Commission said the rules on standing for election should aim to promote the following principles:

- The rules should as far as possible facilitate participation in the electoral process.
- The rules should be straightforward, clear and unambiguous.
- Fair treatment as far as possible for all candidates.
- The rules should be as consistent as possible across different types of election.
- The rules should be up to date.²³

33. It also said:

“We consider that there are at least two key principles that should underpin legislation on disqualifications:

- First, the Assembly may decide that there are certain officeholders or employees whose involvement as candidates in an election could compromise or undermine the integrity or impartiality of the election process.
- Second, the Assembly may decide that there are certain offices or employed positions which are incompatible with

²³ Written Evidence DQ 1

membership of the Assembly, because the effective or impartial discharge of either function could be compromised or undermined by the appearance of a conflict of interest.”²⁴

34. The Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales also identified some basic principles:

- Rules should be designed to encourage participation and any barriers should be proportionate;
- Rules should be designed to deal with perceived conflicts as well as real ones;
- Rules should be clear and unambiguous;
- Rules should distinguish between individuals who are disqualified and office holders who are disqualified.²⁵

35. Keith Bush QC felt that the next order should continue to be drafted so as to disqualify from membership of the Assembly those who hold any public office which:

- (a) carries with it a significant financial benefit to that person that emanates from the Welsh Government; or
- (b) is, itself, subject to scrutiny by the Assembly.²⁶

36. He added:

“Clearly, the application of test (a) calls for a judgement as to what constitutes a significant financial benefit. It would seem obvious that an office which is unpaid, other than the reimbursement of expenses, ought not to generate a disqualification. The Memorandum from the First Minister suggests that in the past other remuneration, up to as much as £10,000 per annum, has been disregarded.”²⁷

37. He confirmed that the two principles continued to be vital and that they “are absolutely the core principles to do with the separation of powers and the avoidance of conflicts of interest.”²⁸

²⁴ Written Evidence DQ 1

²⁵ Written Evidence DQ 9

²⁶ Written Evidence DQ 6

²⁷ Ibid

²⁸ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 163], 16 June 2014

38. He added:

“If there is an argument for going further than that, and including certain organisations where their functions are non-devolved officially, but their relationship with the Assembly is so close that they are virtually in that same position—I am thinking, for example, of organisations involved in broadcasting in Wales—then fair enough; it is a matter of policy to do that. However, my fear is that, at present, there is no definitive and clear statement of those principles.”²⁹

39. The Electoral Reform Society Wales felt that an open set of criteria should be published by which an office should be judged on whether it should be disqualified. The Society illustrated the kinds of issues that would need to be considered around, for example, Welsh Government funding:

“I am sure that the RSPB must get some Welsh Government funding to do some kind of programme work. The RSPB’s core funding comes from its own funding streams, whether that is fundraising or membership fees, commercial activities or whatever. That is kind of independently funded and I think, therefore, that it is appropriate that it is up to that organisation to determine its own policy in relation to who should be disqualified from standing. For an organisation like Cynnal Cymru, however, its core funding does come from the Welsh Government, so I think that that places it in a slightly different bag, if you like. The chief executive of that organisation is accountable to a sponsor team within the civil service, which the director of RSPB is not. So ... we should be careful not to draw too many organisations into that, but I think that there are kind of clear differences between the two types of organisation.”³⁰

³⁰ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 138], 28 April 2014

Our view

40. As Keith Bush QC said in his evidence, “there can be no higher service to the public in Wales than to be an Assembly Member.”³¹

41. Promoting democratic participation and the right to stand for elected office must therefore be at the heart of any principles that underpin the rules governing disqualification from being an Assembly Member. We agree with those who have suggested that any disqualifications that do exist must be restricted to a minimum, as well as being proportionate.

42. We believe that more citizens are likely to consider standing for election if the rules are clear, easily explained, accessible and properly communicated to those organisations that are referred to in the legislation.

43. We also note the principles advocated in evidence provided to us.

Recommendation 1: we recommend that the following principles, or ones similar to them, should inform who should be disqualified from membership of the National Assembly for Wales:

Principle 1: Promoting democratic participation and the right to stand as an Assembly Member are paramount.

Principle 2: Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales should be restricted to as few citizens as possible.

Principle 3: Political activity is inappropriate for some citizens in order to:

- i. protect the independence of the electoral process;
- ii. prevent conflicts of interest arising on election; and
- iii. protect certain public offices from political bias.

Principle 4: The following citizens should be affected by a disqualification order:

³¹ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 231], 16 June 2014

- i. those whose role involves an over-riding requirement for impartiality, including those whose responsibilities include the electoral process itself;
- ii. those who hold any public office which carries with it a significant financial benefit from the Welsh Government;
- iii. those who hold public office and in that role provide formal advice to the Welsh Government;
- iv. those who hold any public office which is subject to scrutiny by the Assembly.

Principle 5: Where disqualifications are necessary they must be:

- i. in line with these principles;
- ii. clear and unambiguous;
- iii. proportionate.

44. When we refer to public office (apart from references to specific public offices) we mean offices referred to in legislation to which appointment is made by the National Assembly or by Welsh or UK Ministers. They will include individual offices such as commissioners and members of collective authorities such as boards.

45. The principles in recommendation 1 have been taken into account in reaching our conclusions in Chapter 4, Proposed changes to the legislative framework and Chapter 5, Proposed changes to the 2010 Order.

4. Proposed changes to the legislative framework

Introduction

46. As indicated in Chapter 2, there would appear to be anomalies within the legislative framework that need to be remedied.

47. In addition, one of the key issues to be considered by our inquiry is the timing of disqualifications. Any changes to the existing system would require changes to law that are outside the legislative competence of the National Assembly (such as changes to the Government of Wales Act 2006) or the powers of Welsh Ministers (such as the The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007).

48. Other issues have been raised during evidence sessions that equally need to be examined as part of the overall legislative framework or relate to amending the Government of Wales Act 2006. There may also be consequences for other primary legislation.

49. These matters are considered below.

Timing of disqualification

50. As the legislation currently stands, all disqualifications become relevant when a candidate is nominated for election.

51. The Electoral Commission considered that the current rules do not distinguish between standing as a candidate in an election and being disqualified if elected.³² It felt that a clearer distinction³³ is needed and explained that it was about:

“... looking at whether the disqualification should bite at the time of candidacy, because there is an issue about standing and campaigning for election that potentially undermines the electoral process or the integrity of the organisation that they are representing, and that which is really only a conflict of interest between holding office of a body and being an

³³ Ibid

Assembly Member ... each body listed in the Order could potentially be looked at in terms of those criteria.”³⁴

52. The Electoral Commission acknowledged however that this approach could risk making the order more complex, adding that a revised order would have to be drafted in a “very clear way”.³⁵

53. Support for the approach of separating nomination from election came from the Electoral Reform Society Wales³⁶ and the Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales.³⁷

54. Many witnesses also considered that the disqualification could take effect on taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance, as required by section 23 of the Government of Wales Act 2006, and Standing Order 1 of the National Assembly’s Standing Orders.

55. Lawyers in Local Government suggested that disqualification should take effect on taking the oath of office.³⁸ They added:

“To effect an earlier date will impact on the number of potential candidates able to consider election to the NAW. The effective date of disqualification would enable potential candidates to seek election safe in the knowledge that they could do so without risking their livelihood.”³⁹

56. When it was suggested that a conflict of interest applied from the declaration of candidature, Lawyers in Local Government said:

“I come from a position of not wanting to exclude people from being able to stand for the National Assembly. I think that, if you are expecting someone to resign their post at the point of candidature, you will lose people—it will restrict the number of people coming forward. I suggested the point of declaration of office because you are then expecting people to lose their jobs when they know that they have got the position. I can accept your argument in terms of that difficult period in between, but one thing has to override the other and, to me, it is not excluding people from the political process—it is not excluding people from the Assembly.”⁴⁰

57. Lawyers in Local Government explained its position by saying:

“You are employed, and you choose to stand for office. You are selected, you go for election and you are able to do all of that until you get to the point where you are elected and you have to take the oath. It does not matter what you do for a living. You can stand and you can be elected, but, when you are elected, you then must make a decision. You either stay as a Member of the National Assembly and give up your job or you keep your job and give up your office.”⁴¹

58. The Independent Remuneration Panel for Wales⁴² felt that shortly before taking the oath as an Assembly Member would be the most appropriate time for a successful candidate to be required to resign from any disqualifying positions.⁴³ In their view;

“This would reduce the risk of discouraging persons from standing for election because they would be required to resign positions or employments whilst having no certainty of becoming elected.”⁴⁴

59. The Electoral Reform Society Wales had “no strong view”⁴⁵ but considered that waiting until the oath is taken gives both the individual and the organisation from which they have come slightly more time to prepare, adding:

“ ... it would appear to me that there are probably more practical benefits to doing it that way, but I think that we would need to be satisfied that, perception wise, there were not drawbacks to that.”⁴⁶

⁴⁰ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 21], 12 May 2014

⁴² The Panel was appointed in January 2008 by the Welsh Government and established initially to determine the range and levels of allowances payable by county and county borough councils to their councillors and co-opted members with voting rights. The Panel’s remit was extended to include members of National Park authorities, Welsh fire and rescue authorities and community and town councils.

60. The Older People’s Commissioner for Wales explained that she was not in favour of a person being barred at nomination because of the groups it would disadvantage, saying:

“I think that some of the very people that we want to bring into the political environment—people on low incomes, women, or people who are carers, for example—are the people who could not afford to give up their jobs, and I think would not just be barred, but would be barred from the circumstances of their life. Actually, I would struggle with that, because I think that it would then mean that those who could afford to come and put their names forward would be the ones put forward, and I want to see a really diverse political base...”⁴⁷

61. Keith Bush QC said:

“There is therefore an overwhelming case, in the interests of attracting the widest choice of candidates for selection and, potentially for election to the Assembly, for changing the current arrangements so that a disqualification based on holding a disqualifying office takes effect after it is clear that the person in question has been elected.”⁴⁸

62. He said that this could be achieved either by giving elected candidates the opportunity to divest themselves of disqualifying offices after election but before taking the oath or affirmation or, alternatively, by providing that candidates who hold disqualifying offices are deemed to have resigned from that office with immediate effect, if returned as an Assembly Member. Either of these approaches would, he said, require primary legislation.⁴⁹

63. He also considered that the election rules (as currently contained in The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007) should no longer require candidates, when accepting nomination, to declare that, to the best of their knowledge and belief, they do not hold a disqualifying office at that time.⁵⁰

⁴⁷ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 181], 2 June 2014

⁴⁸ Written Evidence DQ 6

⁴⁹ Ibid

⁵⁰ Ibid

64. When questioned on these approaches, he said:

“I have reflected a bit more on that, particularly in the light of some of the evidence that you heard ... With ... automatic divestiture of any disqualifying offices or employment ... having thought about it, it is clearly a matter that concerns some people, who have raised the issue of whether you would need to allow someone to give notice, clear their desk and hand over their job to somebody else. I think that there is a lot of force in that. So ... probably, of the two, I would tend towards the more conservative approach, which is to ... give people, in effect, up to two months in which they can get their act in order. In that time, they cannot vote and they cannot take part in proceedings. So, that is a burden. If they have not cleared things with their employers beforehand, then they will incur that burden and their parties will incur that burden. However, it seems to me that that would be less disruptive of people’s employment and so on than a system whereby somebody might wake up one morning to find that one of their employees had suddenly ceased to be an employee without any kind of effective warning whatsoever.”⁵¹

Using internal administration rather than the law

65. The Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales highlighted how the law is not the only tool that can be used to control disqualification from standing as a candidate for the Assembly and that an organisation’s internal administrative arrangements could play a role.⁵²

66. He felt that if a member of staff was selected as a candidate “we would have to discuss with that individual what their time commitment was going to be on their political activities” but that this would be the same as for example “someone had caring responsibilities” or “if a member of their family was ill”.⁵³ As a result, the Chief Executive felt that the activities of Natural Resources Wales:

⁵¹ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 227], 16 June 2014

⁵² CLA Committee, RoP [paragraphs 83-84], 2 June 2014

⁵³ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 124], 2 June 2014

“... are sufficiently detached from Government that we could handle the situation where somebody was selected ... However, at nomination, there would have to be a formal standing back.”⁵⁴

67. He explained his position on nomination:

“... I would draw a distinction between people being nominated, having the right to stand as an Assembly Member, and the point of election. In my view, no problem arises as a result of their candidature. As an organisation, of course, we would have to make sure that they would stand down as a staff member or a board member, but in and of itself I do not see that as a problem. The only problem is if they are then elected to office and then there is a conflict, in my opinion, at least.”⁵⁵

68. The Chief Executive also noted that, in terms of a member of staff on a sabbatical standing for a political party, he:

“... would be perfectly willing to accept a member of my executive team leaving the organisation for that period in order to stand for a political party, and I would expect them to be completely impartial when they came back.”⁵⁶

69. The Chief Executive added that if they were elected, there would need to be discussions about contracts and agreements with staff concerned and the unions.⁵⁷

70. The Electoral Reform Society Wales also illustrated how internal processes could be used:

“For example, there may be, say, a board member of the Arts Council for Wales who wants to chuck his or her hat into the ring and contest the election ... it would be unfortunate if they were forced to resign in order to contest an election. As long as it is clear in terms of how the arts council functions that that member was absenting themselves from any decision where it may be perceived that there was, or there actually was, a conflict of interest, then I think I would be satisfied with that.”⁵⁸

⁵⁷ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 89], 2 June 2014

⁵⁸ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 102], 28 April 2014

71. Following on from this, when it was suggested that there could be internal rules in organisations to deal with candidature, short of legislation, for many organisations, the Electoral Reform Society Wales said it “is certainly something that should be explored.”⁵⁹

72. The Older People’s Commissioner for Wales spoke of her code of conduct that explicitly covers political activities and that staff are advised of on their induction. The code ensures that her staff:

“... know that they can come to me to discuss those issues ... in order to get the balance right—namely encouraging people to want to be a part of debates and to take an interest, but not to cross a line that would impact upon my role as a statutory, independent, apolitical commissioner.”⁶⁰

73. She also agreed with the Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales regarding dealing with staff wishing to stand for election by means of her organisation’s internal process, noting that “it is very hard to legislate for discretion”.⁶¹

Distinguishing between staff within organisations regarding nomination as a candidate

74. We asked the Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales if he thought there was a question of proportionality when it came to staff and members at different levels within an organisation. In response, he said:

“For Welsh Government sponsored bodies, staff are not civil servants and we are principally delivery organisations. So, the amount of interaction with the political system is fairly small, and, mainly, it is through me and, obviously, the chairman. So, I do not see a distinction based on the level of grade. I think that someone from any grade within a WGSB should be allowed to stand to be an Assembly Member. Personally, and it is a personal view, I would not distinguish between various grades on that.”⁶²

75. He went on to say:

⁵⁹ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 104], 28 April 2014

⁶⁰ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 134], 2 June 2014

⁶¹ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 154], 2 June 2014

⁶² CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 78], 2 June 2014

“... you would probably run into complications around which grades were eligible and which were not ... we have quite junior members of staff who regularly liaise with Assembly Members and Members of Parliament. Again, it would be quite difficult, I think, for them to continue in their job if they had a formal nomination to stand in an election”.⁶³

76. The Older People’s Commissioner for Wales indicated that she and her deputy commissioner should be barred from standing for nomination as an Assembly Member (see also paragraphs 121 to 122), but added:

“I do not hold the view that any of my other staff should automatically be barred from standing ... I think the reason for that is that we want to encourage as many people as possible to be part of the democratic process ... I would find it very difficult to distinguish between what is a junior and what is a senior member of staff in terms of day-to-day activity.”⁶⁴

Employees and employers rights

77. As is apparent from the preceding sections, the point at which a disqualification takes effect has implications for both employees and employers.

78. The Electoral Commission felt that:

“If certain disqualifications were to apply at the time of election and not at nomination, there remains the issue of notice periods. A conflict of interest would continue to apply while there was a contract of employment in place and a notice period being served. To address this issue, an elected candidate could be required to resign from the relevant post or office the first working day after the election in order to take up membership of the Assembly.”⁶⁵

79. The Commission noted the potential problems that could exist:

“It is burdensome ... for candidates who are standing for election, because if you are an employee, not only do you need to have resigned, but you need to have served your notice, and for somebody who is on three months' notice, for example, that is a long period of time, and, ultimately, you may have given up your job and not get elected ..."⁶⁶

⁶³ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 106], 2 June 2014

⁶⁵ Written evidence DQ 1

80. The Electoral Commission agreed in questioning that there ought perhaps to be processes within the employment contracts of public bodies to take account of standing for election.⁶⁷

81. Lawyers in Local Government also highlighted the potential problems with notice periods:

"In employment / contract law there will remain the difficulty of the notice period which is likely to range from 1 week to 12 weeks. In practice in Local Government most Authorities would be willing to hold a job open for a local authority staff member seeking election, should that employee be unsuccessful and equally waive contractual rights should the employee be successful. This to promote as far as possible the democratic process. The same cannot of course be said for all employers and it is doubtful that it could be argued that it would be reasonable to expect employers to do so."⁶⁸

82. Lawyers in Local Government were questioned on whether there could be a law in Wales simply saying that contract law is set aside when you become a Member of the National Assembly. In response, they felt it would be "extremely problematic" and "particularly hard on any employer."⁶⁹

83. The Chief Executive of Natural Resources Wales, when questioned about what would happen if a member of staff was elected as an Assembly Member but had for example to serve a 3-month notice period, indicated that this could be dealt with "internally quite easily".⁷⁰ He agreed, when asked, that he would like to see flexibility lying with the organisation rather than in law.⁷¹

Section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006

84. We did not receive much evidence on whether section 16 of the 2006 Act required any substantive change. This section not only includes the power to make a disqualification order, but also directly disqualifies large numbers of people, including all civil servants, members of the armed and police forces as well as staff of the National Assembly.

85. As regards section 16, the Electoral Reform Society Wales were “relatively content with how the legislation stands” and did “not have too much of an issue with how it is”.⁷²

86. Lawyers in Local Government suggested that a person who holds office as lord-lieutenant, lieutenant or high sheriff should be totally disqualified rather than merely disqualified for the area in which they hold office.^{73 74}

The Assembly’s power to relieve individuals of the consequences of disqualification

87. Keith Bush QC raised the issue of section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 whereby the Assembly may resolve that a disqualification be “disregarded” provided the ground had been removed (i.e. the person in question no longer holds the disqualifying office) and it is “proper” so to resolve. He explained the historical background to the case and how the power had been used in 2011.⁷⁵

88. He stated:

“There is a strong case for saying that section 17(3) is an anomalous survival of the time when disqualification was based on a vague and uncertain principle rather than a precise list of disqualifying offices. There may still, of course, be exceptional cases where mistakes are excusable (as the Assembly judged to be the case in relation to the individual in whose favour section

⁷² CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 148], 28 April 2014

⁷³ Section 16(4) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 contains a specific disqualification that a person who holds office as lord-lieutenant, lieutenant or high sheriff of any area in Wales is disqualified from being an Assembly member for any Assembly constituency or Assembly electoral region wholly or partly included in that area.

⁷⁴ Written Evidence DQ 4; CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 159], 12 May 2014

17(3) was invoked in 2011) but individual hardship must be weighed against legal certainty and constitutional rectitude. Even without any change to the point in time when a disqualification bites, the existence of the power in the case of the Assembly seems hard to justify. If the scope for mistakes were further reduced by enabling a candidate who had been elected to carry out a last check and to divest himself or herself of any disqualifying office, then it would seem to be impossible to justify giving candidates who failed to do so a further chance to avoid the consequences.”⁷⁶

89. He thought that the ability of Assembly Members to relieve somebody of a disqualification “is a very unsound procedure”.⁷⁷ He added:

“... looking at it from general principles, if you have a clear and understandable list of disqualifications that are well publicised in advance and give people the opportunity to think carefully about them before they take the oath of allegiance, the rationale and the practical reason for having that power to disapply the disqualification seems to me to cease. Then, all of the arguments are in favour of getting rid of it, because, undoubtedly, it is constitutionally a very strange procedure indeed.”⁷⁸

90. We believe that the process for becoming an Assembly Member can be divided into four main stages:

- (i) selection as a prospective candidate;
- (ii) nomination as a candidate;
- (iii) being elected as an Assembly Member; and
- (iv) taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance.

91. As matters currently stand, all disqualifications become relevant when a candidate is nominated for election.

⁷⁶ Written Evidence DQ 6

⁷⁷ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 235], 16 June 2014

⁷⁸ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 236], 16 June 2014

92. We are persuaded by the evidence of witnesses who have suggested that the disqualification should generally take effect on taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance as an Assembly Member (subject to our views in paragraphs 104-105).

93. In our view this approach is entirely consistent with the principles we outline in Chapter 3 of this report. In reaching this conclusion, we have taken account of the evidence of witnesses who have indicated that it is possible, and preferable, to deal with staff engaging in the electoral process through the internal administration processes of their organisations rather than by means of the law.

94. The approach outlined in paragraph 81 in relation to local authorities is very welcome. As all the offices and positions that give rise to disqualification are in the public sector, we would expect the other organisations affected to take a similar approach.

95. In our view, the change we advocate in paragraph 92 ensures that as many people as possible have the opportunity to stand for election as an Assembly Member, in particular because they do not have to give up their employment to do so.

96. We believe that this change should be effected by a change to the Government of Wales Act 2006. Such a change is outside the legislative competence of the National Assembly and is a matter for the UK Government and UK Parliament.

97. Consistent with our proposed change, we therefore believe that the election rules should no longer require candidates, when accepting nomination, to declare that to the best of their knowledge and belief, they do not hold a disqualifying office. Again, this is outside the legislative competence of the National Assembly, and the powers of Welsh Ministers. It is a change that needs to be effected by the UK Government.

Recommendation 2: we recommend that the UK Government brings forward appropriate legislation to amend the Government of Wales Act 2006 to provide that disqualification from a particular public office should take effect on taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance as an Assembly Member. This change should not apply to a very limited number of posts—as specified in section 16 of the 2006 Act or by order—where being a candidate would, for example, give rise to a conflict of interest or appear to undermine impartiality.

Recommendation 3: we recommend that the UK Government brings forward appropriate legislation to remove the relevant provisions in The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007 requiring candidates, when accepting nomination, to declare that to the best of their knowledge and belief, they do not hold a disqualifying office.

98. We have considered how recommendation 2 could be delivered.

99. We believe there are merits in both of the alternatives considered by Keith Bush QC (see paragraph 62).

100. We accept that requiring persons to take responsibility for their own position by resigning prior to taking the oath is the more conservative of the two approaches. It would require all candidates to be familiar with the Disqualification Order in place at the time. Failure to resign prior to taking the oath would result in disqualification.

101. The more radical approach would involve successful candidates who hold specific public offices being deemed to have resigned by virtue of their election to the National Assembly. This approach would require an order to specify the public offices affected.

102. This is an issue of such significance that we believe it requires further investigation. We are conscious that we may not have heard all possible viewpoints on how recommendation 2 could best be delivered. Accordingly, we consider that it would be unwise to make a specific recommendation in the absence of such additional evidence. In reaching this view, we are mindful that there would be little time to undertake this investigation and put in place primary legislation before the next Assembly general election in 2016.

103. We therefore believe that it would be beneficial if the Law Commission investigated and reported on this issue, potentially as part of a wider review of this issue across all UK legislatures. In our view this would enable the UK Government to consider putting appropriate primary legislation in place in time for the Assembly general election in 2021.

Recommendation 4: we recommend that the Welsh and UK Governments ask the Law Commission to investigate and report on the various legislative options for delivering recommendation 2, and to make a recommendation on what it would consider to be the most appropriate, potentially as part of a wider review of this issue across all UK legislatures.

104. We accept that the holder of some politically restricted posts will need to be disqualified from nomination. Disqualification from nomination would also act as a natural deterrent to selection as a candidate.

105. In our view, there should be a very limited number of persons who would be disqualified from being candidates because of their statutory role. Examples would be Returning Officers and members and staff of the Electoral Commission. These issues are considered in Chapter 5.

106. We are broadly satisfied with section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006. Nevertheless, we consider that as part of the efforts to make legislation clearer, any disqualifications to be contained in the 2006 Act should be set out fully rather than by reference to other legislation. We also consider, for the avoidance of doubt, that those persons referred to in section 16 of the 2006 Act should be disqualified on nomination in line with our preferred approach.

107. We also consider that the Auditor General and Public Services Ombudsman for Wales should be removed from the 2006 Act and included in a disqualification order with other offices, the impartiality of which is equally paramount.

Recommendation 5: we recommend that the UK Government amends section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 to ensure that any disqualifications it contains are set out fully rather than by reference to other legislation and that all disqualifications it specifies take effect on nomination.

Recommendation 6: we recommend that the the UK Government amends section 16(1) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 to remove the Auditor General and Public Services Ombudsman for Wales, so that they may be included in an appropriate disqualification order with other offices.

108. In addition, we agree with Lawyers in Local Government who said that lord-lieutenants, lieutenants and high sheriffs should be totally disqualified from being an Assembly Member, rather than, as is the case now, just for any Assembly Constituency or Assembly electoral region wholly or partly included in their area.

Recommendation 7: we recommend that the UK Government amends section 16(4) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 so that a person who holds office as lord-lieutenant, lieutenant or high sheriff should be disqualified from being an Assembly Member.

109. As regards section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 and the ability of the Assembly to disregard a disqualification, we note the views of Keith Bush QC. We have some sympathy that section 17(3) may be an appropriate provision. However, we are concerned that we do not have a sufficient evidence base to make an informed recommendation about the retention or otherwise of section 17(3), in particular relating to the range of circumstances to be taken into consideration when deciding how change, if any, to section 17(3) should be effected.

110. This being the case, we consider that the Law Commission would be well-placed to undertake this work in tandem with work suggested under recommendation 4.

Recommendation 8: we recommend that the Welsh and UK Governments, in asking the Law Commission to investigate and report in line with recommendation 4, also include a requirement to advise on the implications of retaining, replacing or removing section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006.

111. Any decision taken at some point in the future to change section 17(3) of the 2006 Act by means of legislation, as with any other Assembly function, must be undertaken following consultation with, and the consent of the National Assembly for Wales (as well as the Welsh Government).

Recommendation 9: we recommend that any future legislative change to section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 should only proceed following consultation with, and the consent of, the National Assembly for Wales.

5. Proposed changes to the 2010 Disqualification Order

Anomalies and inconsistencies

112. Throughout our evidence sessions, information was provided regarding specific organisations and how they are affected by the current 2010 Disqualification Order.⁷⁹

113. Keith Bush QC said that there are clearly a number of offices currently designated which do not conform with his criteria (see paragraph 35):

“... because they are neither remunerated by the Welsh Government nor subject to scrutiny by the Assembly. Their activities do not relate to devolved matters, are not within the legislative competence of the Assembly and are not affected by the exercise of executive functions of the Welsh Ministers.”⁸⁰

114. He provided five examples of such offices, including the BBC Trust and the Health and Safety Executive,⁸¹ adding:

“Clarity and consistency would therefore suggest that offices whose functions are not devolved should not give rise to formal disqualifications, particularly since the likelihood of someone wishing to be simultaneously a member of a body such as the BBC Trust and the Assembly is remote.”⁸²

115. As was noted in the Welsh Government’s memorandum, our report on the 2010 Disqualification Order noted some anomalies and inconsistencies.⁸³ For example:

- while members of National Park Authorities (NPAs) are disqualified by the Order, members of other bodies that might be considered analogous to NPAs, such as Police and Fire Authorities are not;

⁷⁹ See in particular the evidence of the Electoral Reform Society Wales: CLA Committee, RoP [paragraphs 89-179], 28 April 2014

⁸⁰ Written Evidence DQ 6

⁸¹ Ibid

⁸² Ibid

⁸³ Constitutional Affairs Committee Report, CA(3)-28-10:24 November 2010 (See annex 1)

- In part 2 of the Schedule to the Order the staff of a number of office holders are disqualified (such as the Auditor General for Wales and the Children’s Commissioner), while others are not (for example, the Commissioners of the Boundary Commission).

The structure of the Order

116. The Electoral Commission felt the 2010 Disqualification Order was long, unclear about what criteria have been applied and not particularly transparent.⁸⁴ However, they did not feel qualified to comment in detail on the bodies and offices currently listed in the Order.⁸⁵

117. The Electoral Reform Society Wales suggested that the list in the 2010 Disqualification Order looked more like a desk exercise of who should be restricted⁸⁶ and suggested the following approach to organising a review of the list:

“Once the guiding principles have been established and you have a long list of potential targets, if you like, then you need a process where you actually spend time with each of those organisations to properly understand their governance arrangements ...”⁸⁷

118. Lawyers in Local Government suggested a different approach:

“It is suggested that there are two options on the drafting of the provisions, the current method of listing those posts determined to be incompatible and in place of the list, a broader statement setting out principles which are determined to be incompatible, those being applied to individual situations.

“Neither is entirely satisfactory, the list being capable of being out of date and the broader statement being open to interpretation and requiring a process of determination.

⁸⁴ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 25], 28 April 2014

⁸⁵ Written Evidence DQ 1

⁸⁶ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 146], 28 April 2014

⁸⁷ Ibid

“A mixture of the two may be advantageous, with a list of those already known and a ‘catch all’ set of principles in respect of others.”⁸⁸

119. When asked how this would work in practice, Lawyers in Local Government acknowledged that it was difficult, noting the complexity of the issues involved and that neither option is perfect.⁸⁹

Distinguishing between staff within organisations for the purposes of the Order

120. In terms of the 2010 Disqualification Order, the Electoral Reform Society Wales struggled:

“... with the rationale for which organisations are on those two separate lists. There are instances where it appears, particularly in the second list, that it is members’ public appointments that are restricted in some form, and others where it is senior staff members in those bodies, and, for others, it is all staff members. Again, I do not really derive from the rules what the logic is for that. If a body is engaged in an area of work that would cause controversy or potential conflict of interest, then why should there be some kind of differential between public-appointed members and staff?”⁹⁰

121. The Older People’s Commissioner for Wales told us:

“My view would be that the only two posts that should be barred or disqualified automatically would be mine and that of the deputy commissioner, because of the type of posts that we hold.”⁹¹

122. She expanded on why her post and that of the deputy commissioner should be disqualified:

“... first, ... I am required by law to appoint a deputy commissioner—it is in the Act, so it becomes a statutory post as part of that. Secondly, the deputy commissioner is very closely aligned to me. So, I will speak as the commissioner, but often, when I cannot do so, the deputy commissioner will go and, by inference, is being me, in a sense. That is not to take away from her own voice and views, but she is often being me. Thirdly, one of the reasons that I have to appoint a deputy commissioner is that, if something happens to me and I am unable to fulfil my functions, she then steps into my shoes. That could be, potentially, for quite a considerable period of time. So, she could be me at short notice, and unexpectedly.”⁹²

123. The Older People’s Commissioner for Wales also felt that the issue of the seniority of the staff “does not really work” because “some who might be called junior staff ... are out and about all the time engaging with people”.⁹³

124. Keith Bush QC also questioned whether it was appropriate to differentiate between staff within an organisation, saying

“If we take one of the commissioners as an example, I do not think that there is any doubt that the Commissioner for Older People in Wales, as an individual scrutinised by the Assembly, should be disqualified from being a Member of the Assembly. Her close advisers—the chief executive, lawyers and so on—would clearly be in that same position. It would not make any sense for them to be Members of the Assembly while simultaneously—and this is what we are talking about—working for the commissioner.”⁹⁴

Timing

125. The Electoral Commission said that the order should be introduced six months before nominations open and that its contents should be clearly communicated to the bodies it lists, political parties, and the Electoral Commission.⁹⁵

126. They added:

“We say that legislation should be in place a minimum of six months before the election, but in the case of the disqualification Order, ideally, it should be in place six months before nomination in order to give people plenty of time. As you said, the earlier the better, to allow for all of those things—the party conferences in the autumn, the selection processes, and so on. The clearer things are for people as far in advance as possible, the better. As I said, we normally publish our guidance in November, ahead of any election the following May, and then the appropriate links to the Order can be included.”⁹⁶

127. Keith Bush QC considered that:

“.. one of the factors that appears to have contributed, in one case, to the situation that arose in 2011, was the late stage at which the 2010 Order was made, namely on the 15 December 2010. (It came into force on the 11 January 2011.) It was not made, therefore, until less than 5 months before the election, and would not have been generally available to the public until about three months before nominations for the election (which was held on 5 May) closed.”⁹⁷

128. As a result, he considered that the order should be made at least twelve months before the date of the relevant Assembly general election, which would reduce the risk of new disqualifications being overlooked.⁹⁸ In making this case, he noted that political parties did not select their candidates in the last six months and in many cases did so a year or two years in advance.⁹⁹ As such, he felt that:

“... it should be possible, in my view, at least a year in advance, for somebody to sit down with the Order, go through it and work out whether or not they are disqualified.”¹⁰⁰

Bilingual Order

129. All respondents who expressed a view on this issue agreed that the order should be made bilingually, including the Welsh Language Commissioner.¹⁰¹

130. Keith Bush QC could “see no constitutional reason why the Privy Council, in relation to Welsh legislation, cannot operate bilingually.”¹⁰²

Our view

131. We have difficulty in understanding the criteria and logic applied to the two lists included in the 2010 Disqualification Order, but recognise that this may be as a consequence of legislation inherited from Westminster.

132. We believe that an order-making power should be retained, but that the order should be restructured to deal with two categories of persons who should be disqualified. We believe persons in category 1 are those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role (such as for reasons of political impartiality, their role in the electoral process or because their posts are created by statute). Category 2 persons are those who should be disqualified having been elected but only upon taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance.

133. However, in making this recommendation as regards category 2, we are conscious that the requirements of section 18 of the Government of Wales Act 2006, will mean that disqualification takes effect on return as an Assembly Member. Accordingly, we make two recommendations for the orders in 2016 and 2021, the latter in anticipation of primary legislation being introduced to deliver recommendation 2.

Recommendation 10: we recommend that the order for the 2016 Assembly general election should specify two categories of persons who should be disqualified:

Category 1: those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role.

Category 2: those who should be disqualified from return as an Assembly Member.

Recommendation 11: we recommend that the order for the 2021 Assembly general election should specify two categories of persons who should be disqualified:

¹⁰² CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 248], 16 June 2014

Category 1: those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role.

Category 2: those who should be disqualified having been elected but only from taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance.

134. The precise way in which category 2 provisions are drafted for the 2021 order may depend on any decisions arising as a consequence of recommendation 4.

135. We have sought to provide an indication of the public bodies and officeholders that we believe should be covered under each category by reference to the existing 2010 Disqualification Order. In so doing, we are mindful of the evidence of the Electoral Reform Society Wales at paragraph 115. The list included in the recommendations should not therefore be considered as an attempt to cover all public bodies and officeholders that should be covered in each category. The Welsh Government is better placed to be aware of those that need to be considered for inclusion or otherwise.

136. In the case of category 1, we believe that some people who hold an office created by statute should not be nominated to stand as an Assembly Member as this would potentially risk the independent and impartial role of the office they hold.

Recommendation 12: we recommend that an order drafted for the 2016 Assembly general election to disqualify persons from nomination as an Assembly Member should include (but not necessarily be limited to) the following:

Auditor General for Wales
Children's Commissioner for Wales
Civil Service Commissioner
Commissioner for Equality and Human Rights
Commissioner for Older People in Wales
Commissioner for Public Appointments
Comptroller and Auditor General
Her Majesty's Chief inspector of Education and Training in Wales
Local Government Boundary Commissioner for Wales
Members of the Independent Remuneration Panel for Wales

Members and Staff of the Electoral Commission
Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration
Returning Officers and local authority staff involved in the electoral process
Statutory deputies of the persons in this list
Welsh Language Commissioner

137. Subject to any changes in the law creating these public bodies or officeholders, we believe that recommendation 12 should also apply in principle to the 2021 Order.

138. In the case of category 2 persons, it is clear to us that no distinction should be made between different people who work within an organisation and to whom principles 3 and 4 of recommendation 1 apply. If for example, it is inappropriate for the Chief Executive of a Welsh Public Body to serve as an Assembly Member, then logically the same principle must apply to the people who work for that Body.

139. As a consequence, any person working for a public body or officeholder in category 1 should be disqualified on return in 2016 and in 2021 from taking an oath or affirmation of allegiance to the National Assembly.

140. In terms of local authority staff, those directly involved in the electoral process and management of elections would be disqualified from being nominated and are included in category 1. We do not believe that it would be appropriate for other staff working for a local authority to serve as an Assembly Member. Accordingly, we consider that all local authority staff not included in category 1, should be included in category 2.

141. The issue of whether broadcasters should be disqualified from membership of the National Assembly was touched upon in evidence. However, we do not feel in a position to make recommendations as to whether broadcasters should be covered in category 2. The timeframe for this report has constrained our ability to investigate this particular issue.

Recommendation 13: we recommend that an order should be drafted for the 2016 Assembly general election that disqualifies the following persons on return as an Assembly Member:

Members of judicial tribunals

Persons appointed by Welsh Ministers
Staff of local authorities not included in category 1
Staff of National Park, Police, Fire and Rescue Authorities
Staff of the organisations referred to in category 1
Staff of Welsh Government Sponsored Public Bodies

142. We believe that the persons disqualified in recommendation 13 should, in 2021, be disqualified from taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance.

Recommendation 14: we recommend that, in preparing a disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election, the Welsh Government consults widely on its contents, including in particular, all those organisations that it covers.

143. The Order must be made in good time to ensure it is communicated and publicised as widely as possible.

Recommendation 15: we recommend that the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election is drafted, consulted on and made no later than 12 months before the date of that election.

144. We agree, as do all respondents who expressed a view, with the suggestion contained in the First Minister's letter that the Disqualification Order for the 2016 Assembly general election should be made bilingually. In our view this would be in line with other Welsh legislation, such as Acts of the Assembly that are approved by the Privy Council bilingually.

Recommendation 16: we recommend that the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election is made bilingually in the Privy Council.

145. The nature of the existing legislative framework is complex. The next chapter considers the timing of the proposed changes for clarity.

6. Timing of proposed changes

Our view

146. As we indicated at the start of our report, we believe that an overhaul of the entire legislative framework is needed for the rules governing the disqualification as a member of the National Assembly for Wales.

147. We have set out in Chapter 3 the principles that we believe should underpin a revised framework.

148. However, the issue of the timing of the proposed changes we suggest in Chapters 4 and 5 for the next Assembly general election in 2016 is complicated by:

- the need for primary legislation to deliver some of the changes we propose and the powers to effect such changes being outside the competence of the National Assembly;
- the power to effect changes we propose to The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007 residing with the Secretary of State and UK Parliament;
- the need for the Welsh Ministers to revise the 2010 Disqualification Order and the power to effect such a change resting with the Privy Council following approval by the National Assembly.

149. Our preferred approach would be for all changes to be effected simultaneously but that is unlikely to be possible in good time for the 2016 Assembly general election, particularly because of the potential time constraints involved in bringing forward primary legislation.

150. This being the case we believe that recommendation 3 (changes in relation to The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007) and recommendations 10, 12 and 13 (regarding the content of the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election) should be implemented simultaneously, with respective legislation in place no later than 12 months before the date of that election (see recommendation 15).

151. This would mean in practice that the disqualification requirement at the time of consent to nomination would be removed but that the requirement disqualifying a person on election at the time of return (under section 18 of the Government of Wales Act 2006) would be retained. Two groups of potential candidates would benefit. The first would be those with no prospect of election who could stand without resigning the disqualifying position. The second would be those with a chance of election, who could delay their resignation until immediately before polling day, a period usually of 3-5 weeks following formal nomination.

152. If the UK Government does not implement the changes described in recommendation 3, then there is risk that the confusion that existed at the time of the 2011 Assembly general election will be repeated.

153. As will be apparent from the previous sections, recommendations 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 11 should be implemented in time for the 2021 Assembly general election.

7. Raising Awareness

Evidence

154. The Electoral Commission told us:

“We are publishing our guidance earlier and earlier. We used to publish guidance in January before any election being held in May ... The earlier you can get guidance out there and returning officers doing briefing sessions for candidates and agents, the better. We also work with the political parties, and the parties, of course, do briefing sessions. It would be essential that any change that the committee was going to consider for the Order in terms of doing it in two stages was done as early as possible so that, for the 2016 elections, if there were to be a change, briefings could be done well in advance as well as having the published guidance.”¹⁰³

155. The Electoral Commission agreed with a suggestion that they were the “go-to body” for potential candidates to obtain this information, adding:

“Obviously, the four big parties in Wales give their own advice to candidates. The ones who do not have anywhere to go for advice are usually independent candidates or those from the very smallest parties that do not have full-time permanent officials giving advice. They tend to rely on our guidance very much.”¹⁰⁴

156. In the course of this report we have noted how some organisations were not aware of the extent to which disqualification rules applied to them.

157. When asked for her view about being disqualified from seeking membership of the National Assembly, the Older People’s Commissioner for Wales told us:

“... in a sense I did not know that I was disqualified, in that nobody had ever told me that when I took up the post of commissioner, but it does not come as any surprise. It is probably right and proper. However, I also was not aware that my staff are disqualified from standing as well, and I suppose that that did come as quite a surprise to me. You could argue that I could have thought, when I was appointed as commissioner, about looking back to check on that, but it did not occur to me, and it was not raised with me.”¹⁰⁵

¹⁰³ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 30], 28 April 2014

¹⁰⁴ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 32], 28 April 2014

158. In terms of making a disqualification order available, and in a way that people could understand, the Electoral Reform Society Wales thought “that the Electoral Commission is probably the best-placed organisation to do that”, adding:

“...enough time needs to be given for each of the parties to digest what these new rules mean, so that they are able to do that kind of dissemination within their political parties—inside their party units—but also for those organisations that are on the list, so that the relevant departments within those bodies are able, again, to understand it and disseminate that information through to the staff.”¹⁰⁶

159. Keith Bush QC felt that:

“I think there is a general issue about the accessibility of Welsh legislation ... The one place I would probably go to would be the Electoral Commission’s website, but, strictly, it is not the lawmaker ... The people whose job it is to do that are The Stationery Office, legislation.gov.uk ... In other words, that organ of the UK Government whose job it is to publish legislation throughout the UK.

“However ... because there are all sorts of people who feel that they should be doing something but do not have a very clear mandate and maybe do not have the resources to do it, that it slips through the cracks. If you now want to know what the current disqualifications are, you have to go through this process of finding it on one of those different sources. It obviously caused practical difficulties that this very important

¹⁰⁶ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 106], 28 April 2014

Order that goes to the heart of democracy in Wales was only approved a few months before the election.”¹⁰⁷

160. Having discussed the merits of those who potentially have a role in publicising who is disqualified from standing as an Assembly Member, he acknowledged that “the Electoral Commission is obviously the body that people go to and look to in order to get that kind of information.”¹⁰⁸

161. Disseminating information about who is disqualified from membership of the National Assembly is vital for ensuring the proper functioning of the institution as a democratic parliamentary body.

162. Many of the changes we are proposing would have implications for public bodies throughout Wales.

163. We believe therefore that all public bodies in Wales should ensure that they have administrative provisions in place to deal with circumstances in which any of their staff may wish to stand for election and that they keep them under review. In particular, we hope that they will review their internal policies and procedures as a result of any legislation that follows this report, and do so in such a way as to facilitate those elected being able to devote all their time to their new role as quickly as possible (see paragraph 94).

Recommendation 17: we recommend that every public body in Wales reviews its rules governing political activities to ensure that all staff are clear about the internal rules that apply in the event that they wish to seek nomination for, and are eventually successful in, election to the National Assembly for Wales. Such rules should take account of any legislation that arises from this report and be subject to review at least 2 years before Assembly general elections that take place after 2016.

164. We believe that the Welsh Government has a major role to play in disseminating and communicating information about political activities, including through the terms of appointment of those appointed by it and its own guidance to bodies affected (regarding their staff).

¹⁰⁷ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraphs 253-254], 16 June 2014

¹⁰⁸ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 260], 16 June 2014

Recommendation 18: we recommend that the Welsh Government reviews the terms of appointment and guidance it gives to appointees, sponsored bodies and other relevant bodies regarding political activity.

165. More generally, raising awareness of our proposed changes will be vital, as is the provision of advice to organisations which do not yet have appropriate internal systems and mechanisms in place.

166. In our view the Electoral Commission should take responsibility for leading on the provision of advice and guidance in relation to electoral rules, and accordingly playing a key role in disseminating information regarding who is disqualified from nomination and election as an Assembly Member. In performing this role it should liaise closely with the Welsh Government, public bodies, political parties and Electoral Returning Officers. We consider that Returning Officers are well-placed to provide advice to candidates seeking election to the National Assembly.

167. The Electoral Commission's guidance needs to be comprehensive and thorough, as well as being easily understood. It must also include a synopsis of all the legislation that applies to someone seeking nomination and election as an Assembly Member.

168. The guidance should also be provided in good time for potential candidates.

Recommendation 19: we recommend that the Electoral Commission reviews its existing guidance on disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales to ensure it is comprehensive and covers all of the relevant policy issues and legislation that apply.

8. Holding more than one political role

Background

169. The UK Government's Wales Bill, introduced to the House of Commons on 20 March 2014, has highlighted the issue of double jobbing i.e simultaneously holding more than one political role. The Bill provides that members of the House of Commons are disqualified from being members of the Assembly, subject to some limited exceptions. The provision is in line with a recommendation contained in a 2009 report by the Committee on Standards in Public Life, MPs' Expenses and Allowances: Supporting Parliament, safeguarding the taxpayer.¹⁰⁹

170. Lawyers in Local Government highlighted in their written evidence the likelihood of conflict in the roles of local, parliamentary and European membership, suggesting that:

“... the committee may wish to consider whether there is an inconsistency or conflict in the role of a NAW Member and other political role ie Local Government ...

“The issue of perceived /actual conflict applies equally to membership of parliament and the EU parliament.”¹¹⁰

171. The issue was also raised in written evidence by the Independent Remuneration Panel for Wales.¹¹¹

172. The Petitions Committee wrote to us in April 2014 drawing our attention to a public petition on this issue¹¹² and the petitioner subsequently provided written evidence.¹¹³

173. We also sought evidence from Assembly Members holding more than one political role and received evidence from Peter Black AM,¹¹⁴

William Powell AM,¹¹⁵ and Russell George AM¹¹⁶, all of whom are elected local councillors.

174. Following our request for information, we also received further evidence from William Powell AM¹¹⁷ and Russell George AM¹¹⁸ on their role as members of the Petitions Committee of the National Assembly.

Dual political role: Assembly Member and local authority councillor

175. The Independent Remuneration Panel for Wales noted the significant time commitment required to discharge the duties of an Assembly Member and said:

“It is the view of the Panel that the Committee should consider the incompatibility of the time commitments of holding posts both as an AM and as an elected member of a principal council and the acceptability of such remunerated ‘twin-hatting’ in the eye of the general public. The Panel has based its determinations on the principle that double remuneration should not occur. Therefore a Leader or Executive Member of a principal council, determined as full-time by the Panel, may not receive a second salary serving as a member appointed to a national park authority or a Welsh fire and rescue authority. The Committee may wish to consider the extent to which this principle is relevant to its deliberations.”¹¹⁹

176. A member of the public indicated that his petition to the National Assembly was to ask the Welsh Government to bring forward legislation to bar the practice of standing as an Assembly Member and local councillor.¹²⁰

177. The Electoral Reform Society Wales said:

“Ultimately, it is for the voters to decide whether they are content for their local councillor to be their Assembly Member or their Member of Parliament as well. Where we draw a distinction, and where we are supporting the sections of the Wales Bill that would impose restrictions, is on double-jobbing between this place and the Commons.”¹²¹

178. On the specific issue of being a local councillor as well as an AM, the Electoral Reform Society Wales added:

“People might have different opinions on that. There might be benefits, there might be drawbacks from it, but ultimately, if there are any conflicts of interest, those should actually be dealt with within the system that exists at the moment. I do not think that a ban is particularly a good idea.”¹²²

179. In terms of a possible conflict of interest, Lawyers in Local Government believed there were arguments for and against double jobbing by Assembly Members and local councillors,¹²³ but added:

“With regard to the time commitment to the organisations themselves, however, I think that that is a fundamental problem.”¹²⁴

180. William Powell AM stated:

“It is my considered view that there is no material or inevitable conflict in being a County Councillor and simultaneously an AM. In fact, the dual role may be mutually supportive to the individual representative and their respective electorate.”¹²⁵

181. Peter Black AM expressed similar views.¹²⁶ In so doing, he noted that:

“... the standing orders of the National Assembly for Wales and each Principal Council allows for the declaration of personal and pecuniary interests.”¹²⁷

182. He also considered that:

“In the case of being a Councillor and an AM, the former role is part-time, tends to serve the same set of constituents and can be managed in addition to the full time job through good time management. Clashes of meetings can be avoided.”¹²⁸

183. He agreed with the views of the Electoral Reform Society Wales saying “the decision as to whether to allow a dual role should belong to the electorate”,¹²⁹ a view also shared by William Powell AM¹³⁰ and Russell George AM.¹³¹

184. In his written evidence, Russell George AM referred to the time pressures involved in undertaking a dual role:

“... it is not always easy to manage the two workloads, which are sometimes competing and conflicting and I rely heavily on extremely efficient and competent members of my Assembly staff team, to effectively manage my Assembly casework with Powys County Council and ensure that there are appropriate Chinese Walls in place where my local authority casework may potentially conflict with my Assembly work ... that process works well. The other issue which is difficult to manage is fulfilling the meeting commitments of both the National Assembly and Powys County Council. It is impossible to maintain maximum attendance at all the relevant meetings of both institutions because of competing business and because of the geographic distance between Cardiff and Llandrindod Wells. In my view, each institution has equal status because they are equally important for the voters I represent. However, when a conflict does emerge, I examine the issues on both business agendas and I have to make a judgement call using a utilitarian interest test. The interests of my constituents are of course paramount, however being elected to a national legislature brings with it wider responsibilities for the national good. Therefore in the main, the balance does tend to tilt towards contributing to National Assembly business but that judgement is made on a meeting by meeting basis.”¹³²

185. We explored these issues with Peter Black AM. In questioning on issues surrounding the Assembly’s rules for declaring an interest, he said:

¹²⁸ Written Evidence DQ 8

¹²⁹ Ibid

¹³⁰ Written Evidence DQ 10

¹³¹ Written Evidence DQ 11

¹³² Ibid

“... the Assembly’s declarations of interest rules are much freer ... than those of local councils. In a council, you really are under an obligation to declare virtually everything, either personal or pecuniary; here, you only tend to declare an interest if you would benefit in a greater way than somebody else who is in your position, which really leaves quite a lot of latitude, I think. It is a matter for Assembly Members, and for the Standards of Conduct Committee, as to whether that is too lax a regime. However, I think that, in terms of the conflict—or lack of conflict—between being a councillor and an Assembly Member, I cannot think of a single occasion where you would want to declare that you are a councillor in the Assembly, though I do occasionally mention the fact that I am a councillor when I am making contributions on local government, or even in terms of asking questions, and I think that other councillors do the same thing as well.”¹³³

186. When Peter Black AM was asked whether the public should know that he has a specific interest as a member of a local authority, he said:

“I think that that is possible, and ... I would tend to mention that if I felt that it was particularly pertinent ... However, you could equally make the same argument in terms of farmers, and other professionals.”¹³⁴

187. He did not think that the Assembly oversees the performance and financing of local government, saying that, “local government is accountable to its own local electorate”¹³⁵, before adding:

“In terms of an ordinary Assembly Member who does not hold an executive role within the Assembly, there is no conflict in terms of the decisions that are taken by the Government in relation to the financing and performance of local government. Even the Welsh Government does not have an oversight role in relation to Local government, apart from in terms of the money that it gives authorities and what is in statute.”¹³⁶

¹³⁴ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 28], 2 June 2014

¹³⁵ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 29], 2 June 2014

¹³⁶ Ibid

188. He stated that:

“... there is more potential for conflict between being a Welsh Minister and being a councillor, simply because Ministers have specific executive roles. As an Assembly Member, there are very few opportunities for conflict. Both roles can be performed adequately and without any potential problems”.¹³⁷

189. He also said:

“I think that it would be more difficult to be a cabinet member and an Assembly Member, or a cabinet member here and a councillor there. There would be some conflict of interest. That is a matter that needs to be dealt with separately from the issue that you are scrutinising here, of course, because you are looking at whether you should bar councillors from becoming Assembly Members, which I think is a slightly separate issue ... I would not try to do an executive role on either body at the same time as serving on the other.”¹³⁸

190. In terms of how resources are used, Peter Black AM said:

“You do not get many resources as a county councillor, but I do a lot of work in my own time as a councillor. I try to make sure that there is division there, but, sometimes, you do have a blurring. For example, I have an e-mail address as a councillor, an e-mail address as an Assembly Member and my personal e-mail address. Even I cannot manage three e-mail accounts. So, I tend to do everything through the one e-mail account. However, I make it clear to officers in what capacity they are being lobbied or approached. So, there is some blurring of the lines, but, by and large, I use the resources that are appropriate to the relevant case.”¹³⁹

191. Keith Bush QC thought that it “is not really a legal issue”¹⁴⁰ and said that:

¹³⁷ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 33], 2 June 2014

¹³⁸ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 62], 2 June 2014

¹³⁹ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 60], 2 June 2014

¹⁴⁰ CLA Committee, RoP [paragraph 271], 16 June 2014

“... it is a matter for public debate and a matter of policy. It is not a constitutional issue in the same way that disqualification on the grounds of conflicts of interest is”.¹⁴¹

192. He could see the arguments on both sides noting:

“The double-jobbing issue relates to people’s feelings as to whether it is appropriate that people who are Members of the Assembly should be devoting their time to other activities ... It is more difficult I think when you come to local government, because there is a rather unclear relationship between the Assembly and local government. Local government is, in theory, autonomous, but, in practice, is financed almost entirely by funds that are provided under the supervision of the Assembly. So, there is a potential conflict of interest argument, I suppose, there.

“On the other hand ... there are those who say that elected politicians and the public generally benefit from the involvement of Assembly Members in certain other activities.”¹⁴²

193. In terms of reviewing the National Assembly’s code of conduct in how it deals with those sorts of conflicts of interest, he acknowledged that some rules:

“... are notoriously unclear ... particularly in relation to legislation. By all means look at their clarity and so on, but you may create other difficulties—there will be knock-on effects, undoubtedly. So, all Assembly Members may have conflicts of interest in relation to their everyday lives or whatever ... So, all of the time, you are having to manage your public functions as legislators with your individual situations as citizens affected by the legislation. It is not easy to draw a hard-and-fast line between those conflicts of interest, which have to be eliminated, those that you can tolerate and those in the middle, which you have to accept that you have to manage in some way.”¹⁴³

194. When questioned on whether there was a particular conflict of interest with someone being a cabinet member of a local authority and then being an Assembly Member, if that particular authority is perhaps brought into special measures under the education provisions, he said:

“There, this is an even clearer conflict or potential conflict, as in the case of an ordinary Member, obviously. It is a question of degree in my view. Again, I am sure that there are strong views held on either side in relation to that. Of course, our system does not aspire to eliminate conflicts of interest altogether.”¹⁴⁴

Dual political role: member of the House of Lords and a local authority councillor

195. The Electoral Reform Society Wales told us:

“To a degree, peers’ work is not as onerous as that of Members of the House of Commons and perhaps there is merit to having some people here who are members of the House of Lords and are able to go up to that place and provide a devolved aspect. They are obviously not working, full-time peers. They are only occasionally going to the other place. They are not being paid a full-time wage, as it were, as Members of Parliament are; they are only receiving allowances for when they are there—daily expenses. Again, I think that, on balance, we would probably say no, you should not stop people from being AMs and peers.”¹⁴⁵

196. Lawyers in Local Government expressed concern about the time commitment¹⁴⁶ and failed to understand how both roles could be undertaken properly.¹⁴⁷ They added:

“Is the role of someone in the House of Lords a bar to their being a candidate here? Maybe there is not; but, because they scrutinise legislation, it could depend on what that legislation is.”¹⁴⁸

Our view

197. Although we did not seek specific comments on the issue of holding more than one political role, as the background to this section shows, it is an issue that has been raised by some witnesses and is currently being discussed in the UK Parliament as a consequence of provisions contained in the UK Government's Wales Bill.

198. This issue comes within the terms of reference of our inquiry and so we believe it is appropriate to consider this issue. In so doing, we are clear therefore that the scope of the inquiry has not been changed to accommodate consideration of this issue.

199. The evidence highlights the very real difficulties that exist in seeking to determine whether or not dual mandates are appropriate. There are clearly strong arguments on both sides.

200. In our view the dual mandate to serve as an Assembly Member and a local authority councillor requires further investigation and a more formal, specific review.

201. In coming to this view we are mindful of two issues.

202. First, we do not believe it would be feasible to resolve this matter before the 2016 Assembly general election. As such, following the review, should a legislative change be considered appropriate, it would make sense to make this change in time for the 2021 elections, in line with recommendations 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 11 of our report.

203. Secondly, we are conscious that there are proposals to reform local government in Wales¹⁴⁹ and it would make sense to consider the dual role issue as part of the roles and responsibilities of local authority councillors that emerge from that reform.

Recommendation 20: we recommend that the Welsh Government commissions an independent review of the feasibility of holding a dual mandate as an Assembly Member, and local authority councillor (including having regard to: the potential for conflicts of interest, time commitments involved and issues of public perception) and to make recommendations.

¹⁴⁹ Welsh Government, Devolution, Democracy and Delivery: White Paper –Reforming Local Government, 8 July 2014

204. As regards a dual mandate to serve in the House of Lords and as an Assembly Member, we believe the issues are clearer. We are satisfied that there is potentially a conflict of interest in having the ability to serve two legislatures that scrutinise primary and secondary legislation that potentially could cover the same policy area. The same argument can be made in relation to membership of other legislatures, although it is unlikely that anyone would seek to be a member simultaneously of more than one devolved legislature.

205. In our view, it would be unfair to effect such a change retrospectively given that a peerage is held for life and it would be unreasonable to expect any individual to make a choice now between being an Assembly Member and a member of the House of Lords.

Recommendation 21: we recommend that the UK Government prohibits the practice of standing as an Assembly Member and a Member of the House of Lords, but that such a prohibition should not be applied to anyone who is currently serving as a member of both institutions.

Dear Rosemary

Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales

I am sure you will recall that, in the period immediately following the last Assembly elections in 2011, issues arose about the election of two candidates, each of whom at the time of their election held public offices which disqualified them from membership of the Assembly. In the event, the Assembly agreed that one candidate should be allowed to become a member of the Assembly, but the other was disqualified from membership. This was a reputationally-damaging business for the Assembly, and one which I am sure none of us would wish to see repeated.

In that context, I am writing to ask if you would consider asking the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee to carry out an inquiry into the rules pertaining to disqualification from Assembly membership. This is a matter that is of concern to all Assembly Members, and it seems right to me that an Assembly committee should have the opportunity to consider the issues and report on them. If you agreed and the Committee were minded to carry out an inquiry, the Committee's findings and conclusions could then inform our thinking on the content of the next National Assembly for Wales Disqualification Order, which will need to be made prior to the next Assembly elections in May 2016.

As you may be aware, section 16 of Government of Wales Act 2006 ('GOWA 2006') identifies a number of persons who, by reason of the offices or employments they hold, may not be members of the Assembly. Additionally, it provides for an Order in Council ("Disqualification Order") to designate further offices and employments, the holders of which would also be disqualified from becoming members of the Assembly.

This Order is to be laid before and approved by a resolution of the Assembly before a recommendation is made to Her Majesty in Privy Council. Section 16 of GOWA 2006 does not require the Order in Council to be laid before the UK Parliament and therefore the UK Parliament has no role in making this Order.

Past disqualification orders have sought to strike a balance in terms of disqualifying posts and employments: allowing as many citizens as possible to stand for election, whilst protecting the legislature from undue influence by government-paid office-holders, protecting the public purse by avoiding conflicts of interests, and protecting the impartiality of certain bodies from the appearance of party political bias.

The time is now right to start considering the principles which should be reflected in the next Order. I would like it to be as clear and accessible as possible, and to eliminate any unnecessary complexity. Most importantly, it should reflect a broad political consensus in the Assembly.

I am aware that CLAC's predecessor, the Constitutional Affairs Committee ('CAC'), raised concerns when it considered the last Disqualification Order in draft, prior to Assembly consideration of it. CAC identified disparities between treatment of bodies that were inherited unchanged from the previous list and those that were newly added to it. The Committee was also concerned that it had had no opportunity to shape the Order, but merely was being asked to recommend acceptance or rejection.

Given these concerns, I believe it would be beneficial for CLAC to examine the principles underpinning the disqualifying posts and employments contained in the previous Disqualification Order and, so far as possible, recommend a new list of disqualifying posts and employments. This is an issue of concern to the Assembly as a whole, and I believe that CLAC would be well-placed to assist in the creation of a broad consensus on the issues.

There are also a number of incidental issues that the Committee might wish to consider. One of these is the timing of when disqualifications take effect. A person who holds a disqualifying office at the point of consent to nomination currently needs to resign that office before consenting; otherwise they would be guilty of a corrupt practice (as per the National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007). But it is hard to justify a requirement that an individual must resign membership of a public body simply on account of the possibility of later election to the Assembly. The Secretary of State for Wales makes the relevant Order covering this aspect in exercise of the powers conferred on him by section 13 of the 2006 Act and so the Welsh Government have no direct influence over it. Nevertheless, I see a clear disincentive in the process and would see advantage in the Committee also considering this issue.

Another such issue is whether Disqualification Orders should be made by the Privy Council in bilingual form. Even though an Order will be a statutory instrument extending to the whole of the UK, its practical application is limited to Wales and, as a matter of principle, in my view the Order should be made both in English and Welsh. I would be interested to hear the Committee's views on this issue too.

Should the Committee pursue this matter, it would be helpful if they could publish a Report by the end of this year's Summer Recess. The Assembly could debate the issues in the autumn, and we could then move forward to the drafting of the Order around this time next year. The Welsh Government would of course be willing to submit a memorandum to the Committee to assist their consideration of the issues.

I would be glad to know of your views on this issue.

I am copying this letter to David Melding AM.

Yours sincerely

CARWYN JONES

Annexe 2 – Welsh Government Memorandum

Following the First Minister's invitation in January 2014, the Assembly's Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee ('CLAC') have agreed to undertake an inquiry into matters pertaining to disqualifications from Assembly membership. As part of the scrutiny, they have asked the Welsh Government to submit a Memorandum which would aid them in their consideration of these matters.

The Welsh Government was pleased to learn that CLAC have agreed to undertake this inquiry which we hope will help to improve and streamline the rules relating to disqualifications from Assembly membership. We believe that this is an issue of concern to the Assembly as a whole, and CLAC is therefore well-placed to assist in the creation of a broad cross-party consensus on these matters. The inquiry also presents an opportunity to raise public awareness of these important matters which have a direct impact on the way Wales is governed.

To assist the Committee's scrutiny, this memorandum sets out the Welsh Government's consideration of these issues which is based on our experience of the operation of these rules.

The memorandum is divided into three parts – we first consider the contextual framework for disqualifications; then we turn to the issue of the content of the Disqualification Order; and lastly we discuss the incidental issues that are of relevance to disqualifications but are not directly within the Welsh Government's remit to deal with.

The Context

Generally speaking, restrictions on membership are a basic feature of elected legislatures. While certain restrictions are necessary, they are a limit on people's democratic rights. In the Welsh Government's view, therefore, the rationale behind disqualifying people from Assembly membership must be well justified, and we should restrict exclusions to the minimum.

There are certain UK-wide qualifications that a prospective candidate must comply with in order to be able to stand for elections to any one of the legislatures in the UK. For example, the person must be at least 18 years old and must be a British citizen, an eligible Commonwealth citizen, or a citizen of any member state of the European Union. Specifically in relation to the Assembly elections, a prospective candidate, apart from meeting the above qualifications for standing for election, must not also be disqualified from standing as set out in the Government of Wales Act 2006 (“GoWA 2006”).

Section 16 of GoWA 2006 identifies a number of persons who may not be members of the Assembly. Additionally, it provides for an Order in Council (“Disqualification Order”) to designate further offices and employments, the holders of which would also be disqualified from becoming members of the Assembly. There are also posts appointed by the Assembly (for example, members of the Independent Remuneration Board and the Standards Commissioner) where the legislation establishing them debar AMs from being appointed to the posts and debar post-holders from standing for election.

The Content of the Disqualification Order

A Disqualification Order has to be laid in draft before and approved by a resolution of the Assembly before a recommendation is made to Her Majesty in Council that the Order be made. In terms of their content, past Assembly Disqualification Orders have tried to strike a balance: allowing as many citizens as possible to stand for election, whilst protecting the legislature from undue influence by government-paid office-holders, protecting the public purse by avoiding conflicts of interests, and protecting the impartiality of certain bodies from the appearance of party political bias.

So, previous Orders aimed to disqualify:

- Holders of offices wholly or partly funded by the Welsh Government. This included salaried, pensionable and certain fee-paid posts, but excluded posts attracting expenses only. Office with remuneration of less than £10,000 per year should not normally attract disqualification.
- Appointments which were made, approved or confirmed by the First Minister, Welsh Ministers or the Counsel General, or appointments on which they had a statutory right to be consulted.

- Office holders whose functions would give rise to an unsustainable conflict of interest were they to be elected as Assembly Members.
- Office holders who were not, or were not seen as being, politically impartial.

These principles formed a basis for the disqualifying posts or employments contained in the previous Disqualification Order. However, Welsh Government officials have reviewed past practice in relation to the content of disqualification orders and highlighted the following issues:

- The disqualifications are long and complex, and individuals may inadvertently fall foul (as two did in 2011) of apparently unjustified disqualifications;
- The complex nature of some of the disqualifications may require prospective candidates to seek legal advice in order to determine whether they are caught by the particular disqualification.

CLAC's predecessor, the Constitutional Affairs Committee ('CAC'), also raised concerns when it considered the last Disqualification Order in draft, prior to Assembly consideration of it. CAC identified disparities between treatment of bodies that were carried forward from the previous list and those that were newly added to the list.

It would therefore be beneficial for CLAC to examine afresh the principles underpinning the disqualifying posts and employments contained in the previous Disqualification Order, propose new principles as appropriate and, so far as possible, recommend a new list of disqualifying posts and employments which could then be included in the next Disqualification Order. We would like the Order to be as clear and accessible as possible, and we would also like to eliminate any unnecessary complexity.

Incidental Issues

There are also other considerations which are incidental to the Disqualification Order. Even though the Disqualification Order will be a statutory instrument with a UK-wide effect, as a matter of principle, we believe that the Order should be made both in English and Welsh.

Another issue to consider is when the disqualifications bite. Whereas the Disqualification Order is for the Assembly to approve in draft, it falls to the Secretary of State, with Parliamentary approval, to make the Order setting out the rules for conduct of Assembly elections. This Order includes requirements relating to nomination procedures. As matters stand, a person who holds a disqualifying office at the point of having to consent to nomination would need to resign that office before consenting, otherwise they would be guilty of a corrupt practice as per the most recent Order, the National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007 (as amended by the National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) (Amendment) Order 2010).

The Secretary of State for Wales makes the relevant Order covering this aspect in exercise of the powers conferred on him by section 13 of the 2006 Act and so the Welsh Government have no direct influence over it. However, we see the current requirements as a clear disincentive to candidates because a person must resign their post or employment in order to stand as a candidate and, if unsuccessful in that election, reinstatement would depend on the terms and conditions of employment that apply. We would therefore see advantage in the Committee also considering this issue.

Conclusion

It is our view that the current structures for excluding persons from Assembly membership do not properly reflect their raison d'être. The disqualifications purport to prevent AMs from holding offices or employments deemed to interfere with the proper fulfilment with their duties. But it is our view that the rules pertaining to disqualifications are increasingly unfit for purpose to the point that, in some instances, they pose a disincentive to potential candidates and thus fall foul of the logic of empowering democratic participation.

For these reasons, we are keen to see how the rules and principles underpinning disqualification can be changed to improve participation from candidates while maintaining public trust and confidence in the conduct of Assembly elections. The Welsh Government looks forward to the outcome of CLAC's inquiry, the results of which could then inform the content of the next National Assembly for Wales Disqualification Order, which will need to be made prior to the next Assembly elections in May 2016.

Annexe 3 – Section B, Written evidence DQ6, Keith Bush QC

B. Legislative framework and background

- (a) Section 16(1) of GOWA 2006, which identifies classes of person disqualified from being Assembly Members, broadly follows the pattern set by section 1 of the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 (“the 1975 Act”). (There are some further disqualifications, covered by section 16(2) and (4) of GOWA 2006, e.g. that relating to persons imprisoned for more than twelve months for criminal offences, but these are not relevant to the issue of those disqualifications which are, through the mechanism of Orders in Council under section 16(1)(b), effectively under the control of the Assembly.)
- (b) The 1975 Act disqualifies from membership of the House of Commons:
- (i) holders of judicial offices;
 - (ii) civil servants;
 - (iii) members of the regular armed forces;
 - (iv) police officers;
 - (v) members of legislatures outside the Commonwealth;
 - (vi) holders of offices described in Part II or III of Schedule 1 to the Act.
- (c) GOWA 2006 disqualified from membership of the Assembly:
- (i) persons in categories (i),(ii),(iii),(iv) and (v) above;
 - (ii) holders of offices designated by Order in Council made under section 16;
 - (iii) the Auditor General for Wales;
 - (iv) the Public Service Ombudsman for Wales;
 - (v) members of the staff of the Assembly itself.

(d) Section 16(1) of GOWA 2006 is paralleled, in very similar terms, by section 15(1)(d) of the Scotland Act 1998 and section 3(1) of the Northern Ireland Assembly Disqualification Act 1975 (applied to the current Assembly by section 36 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998).

(e) Orders in Council under section 16(1)(b) of GOWA 2006 (and corresponding Scottish and Northern Ireland enactments) therefore fulfill the same function as Parts II and III of Schedule 1 to the 1975 Act, which may, itself be amended from time to time by Order in Council under section 5 of that Act.

206. The background to the 1975 Act (and therefore, by extension, to section 16 of GOWA 2006) is the doctrine of the “separation of powers”, i.e. the principle that, in a parliamentary democracy, one of the roles of the parliamentary body is to hold the executive (government) to account and that therefore members of the parliamentary body should, as far as possible, be free of interests which conflict with their ability to do so effectively. This principle was reflected in one of the fundamental constitutional statutes of the United Kingdom, the Act of Settlement 1701, which provided:

207. “That no Person who has an Office or Place of Profit under the King or receives a Pension from the Crown shall be capable of serving as a Member of the House of Commons.”

(f) It is a feature of parliamentary democracy that the separation between parliament and government is not absolute (as it is, for example, under the US Constitution) in that Ministers are drawn from members of the parliamentary body and, indeed, must enjoy the “confidence” (i.e. backing) of the parliamentary body. Nevertheless the exclusion of others holding “offices or places of profit” under the Crown was intended to eliminate from the House of Commons persons who were enjoying the patronage of Ministers and who were therefore less likely to scrutinise Ministers effectively.

(g) A second kind of conflict of interest which has become increasingly prominent, particularly over the last century, arises out of the development of offices and bodies exercising executive governmental functions, but not part of central government itself – the so-called “quangos”. Since such institutions are themselves subject to parliamentary scrutiny, membership of them has been accepted to be incompatible, for that added reason, with membership of the parliamentary body.

- (h) One of the difficulties caused by the proliferation of “quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations” (or “quangos”) in relation to disqualification from membership of the House of Commons was the wide variety of forms that such bodies can take. This made it difficult, sometimes, to decide whether membership fell within the “office of profit under the Crown” test. After considerable discussion, and reports by two House of Commons committees, Parliament eventually moved (via the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1957 and the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975) to a system of specifying (by listing in Schedule 1 of the 1975 Act, as amended from time to time) those offices which disqualify from membership of the House of Commons.
- (i) Parts II and III of Schedule 1 to the 1975 Act originally listed some 300 disqualifying offices. This has since grown, by amendment, to almost 500. The 2010 Order (i.e. the corresponding enactment relating to the Assembly) contains only 107 entries.

REPORT OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE, “INQUIRY INTO THE DISQUALIFICATION FROM MEMBERSHIP
OF THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY FOR WALES” (pub. July 2014)
RESPONSE OF THE WELSH GOVERNMENT

Introduction

1. The Welsh Government is particularly grateful to the Committee for this Report. The inquiry was undertaken at the Government’s request (a somewhat novel procedure), and the result is an extremely useful Report which has stimulated some fresh thinking on our part about this difficult, but fundamentally important, issue. The fact that, as will be seen below, we are not able to agree with each and every recommendation which the Committee has brought forward in no way diminishes the value of the Report, to the Government and we would suggest to the Assembly also.
2. The background to the inquiry, as the First Minister’s letter to the Presiding Officer of January 2014 (reproduced as Annexe 1 to the Report) makes clear, is a concern to avoid in 2016 what happened in 2011: the election of two individuals as Assembly Members who, as it subsequently became known, held offices which under the relevant Order in Council in force at the time were inconsistent with their taking up their Assembly responsibilities. In the event, one person was enabled to become a Member, and one was not; but in the Welsh Government’s view the Assembly probably suffered reputational damage in having, immediately following the elections, to deal over some weeks with a matter very far from the electorate’s concerns. We must do whatever we can to avoid such a situation in 2016.

The Report: Some General Observations

3. As noted above, the Committee’s Report has given the Government an opportunity to think afresh about our general approach to the issues, and it may be helpful before responding to the individual recommendations to set out some general observations.
 - (i) Conflating the Issues?
4. First, we now think that the root of many of the difficulties around disqualification is that the principal legislation, sections 16-19 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 (“GOWA”), conflates two matters which should be kept separate. The first such matter is an individual’s right to be a candidate in public elections; in accordance with the jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights under Article 3 of Protocol 1 to the Convention, this should be generally available to adult citizens, and it will only be in relatively limited circumstances that such a right to candidacy should be denied as a matter of law. The second matter is one of conflict of interest: the Assembly, and voters, have a legitimate expectation that any person elected to the Assembly should be capable of discharging his or her responsibilities without fear or favour, uninhibited by the simultaneous holding of offices which may allow a perception to arise that an individual’s contribution to the Assembly’s work may be inappropriately constrained.

5. Section 16(1)(a) of GOWA identifies five classes of persons who “are disqualified from being an Assembly member”: judges, civil servants, members of the armed forces, members of police forces, and members of foreign legislatures. Section 16(1)(c) and (d) likewise disqualify the Auditor-General for Wales and the Public Services Ombudsman for Wales. Section 16(4) disqualifies from Assembly membership anyone holding office as lord-lieutenant, lieutenant or high sheriff for a part of Wales and whose constituency or electoral region encompasses or includes the area for which service in that office is being given.
6. In the Government’s view, the mischief aimed at here is to prevent the holders of such offices engaging in any public political activity (including electoral candidacy) at all, because they need at all times publicly to demonstrate political impartiality in the discharge of their existing responsibilities. The matter can be tested in this way: if a person covered by any of these disqualifications presented himself or herself as a candidate, then engaged in the ensuing public/political debate, but was unsuccessful at the election, could he or she reasonably expect, and would the public generally expect him or her, to be able to return to their original employment or office, regardless of opinions expressed on matters of political controversy during the election campaign? The Government’s view is that would not be acceptable, and so the policy should be that individuals falling within any of these categories should be disqualified from being candidates at Assembly elections (unless they beforehand permanently divest themselves of the disqualifying office or employment, without possibility of return/reappointment); they fall within the narrow category of people whose right to be a candidate has to be abridged in the interests of wider public policy considerations.
7. This situation can be contrasted with that of conflict of interest. Here, we think the policy should be that individuals holding offices which, if they were elected, might be thought to constrain their ability properly to discharge their Assembly responsibilities, should be able immediately after election to resign those offices: in other words, and consistently with the Convention jurisprudence, their right to candidacy should not be inhibited, but if elected they should only be able to serve as Assembly Members if any potential conflicts of interest are removed.
8. The provisions in GOWA, and in particular the Order-making powers available to the Assembly under GOWA, do not reflect this position, and apply the same penalty of disqualification from Assembly membership (as distinct from disqualification from candidacy) to individuals falling into either category. It is not likely to be possible to secure amendments to these provisions before the next Assembly elections in 2016, but the Welsh Government will pursue this issue with the UK Government with a view to securing reform in the next Parliament.

(ii) Staff of Public Bodies

9. Another class of individuals disqualified from membership of the Assembly, by virtue of s.16(1)(e) of GOWA, are those “employed as a member of the staff of the Assembly” itself. This raises a specific, but also more general issue. The current National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order (SI 2010/2969), which was in force for the 2011 Assembly elections, specifies a large number of disqualifying offices, but in certain instances (for example the Children's Commissioner, the Older People's Commissioner) also specifies that members of staff supporting the holders of those offices should also be disqualified.

10. If we start from the position that individuals should be able to offer themselves for elected public office save in exceptional circumstances, it is not at all obvious why the staff of some public bodies (but not all) should be disqualified in this way. The Welsh Government is inclined to think that, with the possible exception of Assembly Commission staff mentioned above, the next Assembly Disqualification Order should not make disqualifying provision for the staff of any public body, and instead leave it to the public body concerned to manage any situation arising if a member of staff becomes a candidate at the Assembly election. (And it can fairly be assumed that any successful such candidate would resign their employment on election as an Assembly Member, since continuing in the employment of the public body while discharging Assembly responsibilities would make impossible demands on the individual).

Transparency

11. The background to the difficulties mentioned in paragraph 2 above in relation to 2011 was confusion about exactly which offices were to be regarded as disqualifying for the purposes of the 2011 elections. Producing and effectively publicising a new Disqualification Order will not however fully address this problem. The list of disqualifying offices is derived from several sources (GOWA, the Disqualification Order in force at the time, together with any relevant provisions made by extant Assembly legislation), and in certain instances there appears to be repetition; as previously noted, holding the office of Auditor General for Wales disqualifies an individual from membership of the Assembly by virtue of GOWA s. 16(1)(c), but the 2010 Disqualification Order also specifically disqualifies the Auditor General for Wales and members of his or her staff.
12. Given these various sources for disqualification provisions, it may be extremely difficult for any potential candidate to be sure that he or she has not inadvertently infringed any of the prohibitions. In addition, therefore, to bringing forward a new draft Disqualification Order in 2015, the Welsh Government intends, working as necessary with the Electoral Commission, to produce a comprehensive, non-statutory, list of all of the disqualifying provisions of which we are aware, from whatever source, and make it publicly available to parties and potential candidates.

Law Commission

13. Finally, we mention a matter of less significance in the present context, but of wider importance. The Committee in two of its recommendations has proposed that the Welsh Government should ask the Law Commission to investigate and report on two matters. The Welsh Government shares the Committee's enthusiasm for working with the Law Commission (and welcomes the provision in the current Wales Bill that will make this much easier), but we need to bear in mind both that the Commission's resources are limited, and that its services are not a free good; it will frequently be the case that the Welsh Government will have to fund any work specifically requested of the Commission. We hope therefore that Committee recommendations for reference of matters to the Commission will be both sparing and strategic in their approach. In the present case, the Welsh Government intends to address the issues raised in the particular recommendations in a different way to that proposed by the Committee.

The Welsh Government's responses to the Committee's Recommendations

Recommendation 1. we recommend that the following principles, or ones similar to them, should inform who should be disqualified from membership of the National Assembly for Wales:

Principle 1: Promoting democratic participation and the right to stand as an Assembly Member are paramount.

Principle 2: Disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales should be restricted to as few citizens as possible.

Principle 3: Political activity is inappropriate for some citizens in order to:

- i. protect the independence of the electoral process;*
- ii. prevent conflicts of interest arising on election; and*
- iii. protect certain public offices from political bias.*

Principle 4: The following citizens should be affected by a disqualification order:

- i. those whose role involves an over-riding requirement for impartiality, including those whose responsibilities include the electoral process itself;*
- ii. those who hold any public office which carries with it a significant financial benefit from the Welsh Government;*
- iii. those who hold public office and in that role provide formal advice to the Welsh Government;*
- iv. those who hold any public office which is subject to scrutiny by the Assembly.*

Principle 5: Where disqualifications are necessary they must be:

- i. in line with these principles;*
- ii. clear and unambiguous;*
- iii. proportionate.*

Response: Accept in Principle.

14. This recommendation is broadly consistent with the general approach we set out in paragraphs 4-8 above, in recognising that while most citizens should be encouraged to stand for elected public office, a limited class of people should not be permitted to be candidates by reason of their holding their current office or employment. However, and understandably given the current legislative position, the Committee expresses this in terms of disqualification from membership of the Assembly; the Welsh Government would after 2016 prefer the policy to be achieved, for many of those mentioned in this recommendation, by way of disqualification from candidacy.

Recommendation 2. we recommend that the UK Government brings forward appropriate legislation to amend the Government of Wales Act 2006 to provide that disqualification from a particular public office should take effect on taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance as an Assembly Member. This change should not apply to a very limited number of posts—as specified in section 16 of the 2006 Act or by order—where being a candidate would, for example, give rise to a conflict of interest or appear to undermine impartiality.

Response:

15. This is a matter for the UK Government, but as noted in paragraph 8 above, the Welsh Government will want to pursue this general approach with that Government following the 2015 General Election.

Recommendation 3. we recommend that the UK Government brings forward appropriate legislation to remove the relevant provisions in The National Assembly for Wales (Representation of the People) Order 2007 requiring candidates, when accepting nomination, to declare that to the best of their knowledge and belief, they do not hold a disqualifying office.

Response:

16. This is a matter for the UK Government, but the Welsh Government will seek to discuss the issues with that Government ahead of the making of the equivalent Order for the 2016 Assembly elections.

Recommendation 4. we recommend that the Welsh and UK Governments ask the Law Commission to investigate and report on the various legislative options for delivering recommendation 2, and to make a recommendation on what it would consider to be the most appropriate, potentially as part of a wider review of this issue across all UK legislatures.

Response: Reject

17. Given our general approach to Law Commission referrals set out in paragraph 13 above, the Welsh Government is not persuaded that a reference on this matter would be appropriate.

18. The Committee's report has however already raised the profile of this issue and put it on the political agenda, and we believe it should be possible to take forward reforms without referring to the Law Commission. An amendment to the Wales Bill tabled by Lord Thomas of Gresford on 9 October proposed that section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 should be amended so that, where offices are disqualifying offices because they are included in the Disqualification Order in Council, they are not disqualified from standing and have an 8 day grace period following election to resign the disqualifying office. This amendment was discussed during Committee stage in the House of Lords on 13 October. Baroness Randerson, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Wales, was supportive of the purpose of Lord Thomas' amendment, and undertook to work with the Welsh Government on these issues. She agreed that "only those offices for which there is a strong case for inclusion” should be included in the next Disqualification Order.

19. While it is for the Welsh Government to lead on the Disqualification Order under section 16, and for the Wales Office to lead on any Secretary of State order under section 13 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 dealing with conduct of Assembly elections, we welcome this commitment to work together. We will be looking for legislative changes prior to the 2021 Assembly elections, with a view to pursuing the approach outlined in your recommendation 2. For the 2016 Assembly elections, we will bring forward a draft Disqualification Order for consultation in the New Year, on the basis of the approach we have outlined in our response to recommendations 12 and 13 below.

Recommendation 5. we recommend that the UK Government amends section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 to ensure that any disqualifications it contains are set out fully rather than by reference to other legislation and that all disqualifications it specifies take effect on nomination.

Response: Accept in part

20. Given the reference to nomination, we take this recommendation to mean that s.16 should be amended to focus on disqualification of a limited range of individual office-holders, and members of a limited range of classes, from candidacy at Assembly elections. On that basis the Welsh Government accepts the recommendation and will pursue the matter with the UK Government (although we think it likely that s.16 would need to be repealed and replaced, rather than amended, to achieve the desired result). In practice, however, we doubt that even a completely new provision would be able to stand alone, and we envisage taking order-making powers to enable us to keep up to date the list of those who should be debarred from candidacy.

Recommendation 6. We recommend that the UK Government amends section 16(1) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 to remove the Auditor General and Public Services Ombudsman for Wales, so that they may be included in an appropriate disqualification order with other offices.

Response:

21. This is a matter for the UK Government, but the Welsh Government’s initial view is that if it is agreed to replace s.16 of GOWA with a provision as described in our response to recommendation 5, that provision should include mention of these two offices, among others, as ones disqualifying the holders from candidacy (as well as providing for order-making powers to enable us to keep up to date the list of those who should be debarred from candidacy).

Recommendation 7. We recommend that the UK Government amends section 16(4) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 so that a person who holds office as lord-lieutenant, lieutenant or high sheriff should be disqualified from being an Assembly Member.

Response:

22. This is a matter for the UK Government but the Welsh Government would support an amendment to debar the holders of these offices from electoral candidacy (and the offices could be mentioned alongside references to the Auditor General and the Public Services Ombudsman in a replacement for s.16 of GOWA as described in our response to recommendation 7)

Recommendation 8. We recommend that the Welsh and UK Governments, in asking the Law Commission to investigate and report in line with recommendation 4, also include a requirement to advise on the implications of retaining, replacing or removing section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006.

Response: Reject

23. We have set out our general approach to Law Commission references in paragraph 13 above, but we have particular concerns about s.17(3) and are not persuaded that it should remain a part of a reformed statutory scheme about disqualification. The subsection enables the Assembly in effect to waive a breach of the disqualification rules if the ground of disqualification has been removed and “if it is proper so to resolve”. It is not clear to the Welsh Government why the Assembly should in future have such a power if, as proposed in recommendation 2, a successful candidate is enabled immediately after election to divest himself or herself of a disqualifying office and then proceed to assume Assembly responsibilities. Further, in reality the exercise of this power by the Assembly is very likely to be influenced by party political considerations, and there is the potential for reputational damage to the Assembly if the electorate’s choices can appear to be frustrated in such circumstances. The Welsh Government concludes therefore that for the Assembly to possess the power in s.17(3) is undesirable, and in any event it should not be necessary if recommendation 2 is given effect.

Recommendation 9. We recommend that any future legislative change to section 17(3) of the Government of Wales Act 2006 should only proceed following consultation with, and the consent of, the National Assembly for Wales.

Response: Accept.

24. The Welsh Government anticipates that changes to the existing statutory disqualification regime, including any in relation to s.17(3), would be the subject of consultation, and would require the consent of the Assembly via a legislative consent motion.

Recommendation 10. We recommend that the order for the 2016 Assembly general election should specify two categories of persons who should be disqualified:

Category 1: those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role.

Category 2: those who should be disqualified from return as an Assembly Member.

Recommendation 11. We recommend that the order for the 2021 Assembly general election should specify two categories of persons who should be disqualified:

Category 1: those who should be disqualified from nomination because of the nature of their role.

Category 2: those who should be disqualified having been elected but only from taking the oath or affirmation of allegiance.

Response: Reject.

25. The Welsh Government is wholly in sympathy with the thinking behind recommendations 10 and 11, but as was mentioned in paragraph 8 above, the Order-making powers currently available to us do not reflect the important distinction the Committee makes, and it will not be possible to proceed for the 2016 Assembly elections as the Committee proposes. The order-making powers the Welsh Government would wish to take in a reformed statutory regime for disqualification would however enable us to proceed in the way proposed for 2021 and beyond.

Recommendation 12. We recommend that an order drafted for the 2016 Assembly general election to disqualify persons from nomination as an Assembly Member should include (but not necessarily be limited to) the following:

Auditor General for Wales

Children's Commissioner for Wales

Civil Service Commissioner

Commissioner for Equality and Human Rights

Commissioner for Older People in Wales

Commissioner for Public Appointments

Comptroller and Auditor General

Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education and Training in Wales

Local Government Boundary Commissioner for Wales

Members of the Independent Remuneration Panel for Wales

Members and Staff of the Electoral Commission Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Returning Officers and local authority staff involved in the electoral process

Statutory deputies of the persons in this list

Welsh Language Commissioner

Response: Reject.

26. Our current order-making powers do not enable us to disqualify persons from nomination for Assembly elections, they only permit us to disqualify persons from Assembly membership (but as explained above, we will want in the future to take order-making powers permitting the debarring of a limited range of individual office-holders, and members of a limited range of classes, from candidacy).
27. For the 2016 Assembly elections, insofar as the persons listed above are not already disqualified from membership by virtue of section 16 of the Government of Wales Act 2006, we will consult on the disqualification of these persons from membership through the Disqualification Order we intend to take forward under the current order-making powers. In practice, of course, if these persons are included in our Disqualification Order, then they would have to resign from their offices when they are nominated as candidates, assuming the Secretary of State's Order under section 13 of GOWA 2006 requires candidates for election to declare, to the best of their knowledge and belief, that they are not disqualified from membership.

Recommendation 13. We recommend that an order should be drafted for the 2016 Assembly general election that disqualifies the following persons on return as an Assembly Member:

Members of judicial tribunals

Persons appointed by Welsh Ministers

Staff of local authorities not included in category 1

Staff of National Park, Police, Fire and Rescue Authorities

Staff of the organisations referred to in category 1

Staff of Welsh Government Sponsored Public Bodies

Response: Accept in part

28. We agree it would normally be appropriate that "Persons appointed by Welsh Ministers" should be disqualified, but each case will need to be considered on its own merits, and the statutory language to give effect to this will need to be carefully considered. We similarly agree that Members of judicial tribunals should be disqualified. However, for the reasons set out in paragraphs 9-10 above, we are not currently persuaded that it would be appropriate to disqualify from Assembly membership the large numbers of public service staff described in recommendation 13. This is particularly the case under our current order-making powers, as we cannot specify when the disqualification will bite. However, we believe it may not be necessary to disqualify large numbers of public service staff even if we could provide that the disqualification only applies upon return as an Assembly Member, as we could safely assume that they would not be able to continue with their employment as a member of staff of a public body and discharge their responsibilities as an Assembly Member at the same time.

Recommendation 14. we recommend that, in preparing a disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election, the Welsh Government consults widely on its contents, including in particular, all those organisations that it covers.

Response: Accept. Our intention is to begin consultation on a draft Order in Council early in 2015.

Recommendation 15. we recommend that the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election is drafted, consulted on and made no later than 12 months before the date of that election.*

Response: Accept in principle

29. The Welsh Government is fully persuaded of the need to have a new Order in Council in place as early as possible. However, following publication of the Committee's Report in the summer, the First Minister wrote to the Presiding Officer, noting some potential difficulties in precisely meeting the Committee's suggested timetable, and setting out a proposed way forward (including making provision for consultation as required by recommendation 14); that letter is at Annexe 1. The Chair, on behalf of the Committee, has agreed that the First Minister's proposal, which would lead to a draft Order in Council being submitted to the Privy Council in June or July 2015, is acceptable.

Recommendation 16. we recommend that the disqualification order for the 2016 Assembly general election is made bilingually in the Privy Council.*

Response: Accept. We will pursue this with the Privy Council Office as necessary.

Recommendation 17. we recommend that every public body in Wales reviews its rules governing political activities to ensure that all staff are clear about the internal rules that apply in the event that they wish to seek nomination for, and are eventually successful in, election to the National Assembly for Wales. Such rules should take account of any legislation that arises from this report and be subject to review at least 2 years before Assembly general elections that take place after 2016.*

Response: Accept in principle.

30. This recommendation is fully in accord with our general approach in relation to the staff of public bodies, that (with the possible exception of the staff of the Assembly Commission) they should be eligible to seek elected public office. We will give further consideration to how this recommendation should be communicated to, and given effect by, Welsh public bodies.

Recommendation 18. we recommend that the Welsh Government reviews the terms of appointment and guidance it gives to appointees, sponsored bodies and other relevant bodies regarding political activity.*

Response: Accept.

Recommendation 19. we recommend that the Electoral Commission reviews its existing guidance on disqualification from membership of the National Assembly for Wales to ensure it is comprehensive and covers all of the relevant policy issues and legislation that apply.

Response:

31. This is a matter for the Electoral Commission, but as noted in paragraph 12 above, the Welsh Government intends to produce a comprehensive, non-statutory, list of all of the disqualifying provisions of which we are aware, from whatever source, and make it publicly available to parties and potential candidates; and we will work with the Electoral Commission as necessary on this.

Recommendation 20. we recommend that the Welsh Government commissions an independent review of the feasibility of holding a dual mandate as an Assembly Member, and local authority councillor (including having regard to: the potential for conflicts of interest, time commitments involved and issues of public perception) and to make recommendations.

Response: Agree in principle.

32. The Welsh Government accepts that this is an issue that merits careful consideration and public debate, but we are not persuaded of the need to commission an independent review of the matter to facilitate that. Early in 2015 we will be publishing, in connection with our programme of local government reform, a White Paper inviting views on a wide range of relevant issues, and it will be appropriate to include this issue as one on which to seek views. Any ensuing new statutory provision could then be included in the Local Government Bill to give effect to local authority mergers, which we intend to introduce shortly after the next Assembly election in 2016.

Recommendation 21. we recommend that the UK Government prohibits the practice of standing as an Assembly Member and a Member of the House of Lords, but that such a prohibition should not be applied to anyone who is currently serving as a member of both institutions.

Response:

33. This is a matter for the UK Government. It is not however clear to the Welsh Government what has led the Committee to this conclusion. Membership of the House of Lords does not seem of itself to produce a potential conflict of interest with Assembly membership, either in terms of competing time commitments (attendance at the House of Lords is largely voluntary) or competing interests. Matters would however be likely to be different if members of the House were to gain their positions through election, and provisions equivalent to those contained in the current Wales Bill in respect of simultaneous membership of the Assembly and the House of Commons would then presumably be necessary.

Conclusion

34. The Welsh Government reiterates its appreciation for the Committee's work, and looks forward to hearing Members' views on these important issues.

HOUSING, WALES

The Housing (Wales) Act 2014 (Commencement No. 3 and Transitory, Transitional and Saving Provisions) Order 2015

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Order)

This Order brings into force, on 27 April 2015, Part 2 of the Housing (Wales) Act 2014 (“the Act”), with the exception of section 75(3) (intentionally homeless households with children) and the partial exception of section 78 (deciding to have regard to intentionality). The Order also makes transitory, transitional and saving provisions as a result of the commencement of Part 2.

This is the third commencement order made by the Welsh Ministers under the Act.

Article 2 commences, insofar as not already commenced, Part 2 (homelessness) of the Act, subject to the exceptions below. Section 100 of the Act introduces Part 1 of Schedule 3 which makes consequential amendments relating to Part 2 of the Act. These amendments, among other things, have the effect of restricting to England, the application of Part 7 of the Housing Act 1996.

Article 2 also commences section 78 of the Act, but only for the purposes of allowing local housing authorities to decide to have regard to intentional homelessness in relation to specified categories of applicants. It also allows the notices of the decisions to be published.

Article 3 brings section 78 into effect for all remaining purposes on 1 July 2015.

Article 5 saves the Allocation of Housing and Homelessness (Eligibility) (Wales) Regulations 2014. It also modifies the Regulations so that they will operate as if made under the Act.

Article 6 modifies section 75(2)(d) of the Act to omit the reference to deciding to have regard to intentionality, until section 78 is brought into full effect on 1 July 2015.

Article 7 makes a transitional provision in respect of a person who has applied before 27 April 2015 for assistance under Part 7 of the Housing Act 1996.

Article 8 makes a transitory modification to the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970, to refer to the homelessness functions of social services authorities under the Act.

NOTE AS TO EARLIER COMMENCEMENT ORDERS

(This note is not part of the Order)

2015 No. 1272 (W. 88) (C. 73)

HOUSING, WALES

The Housing (Wales) Act 2014
(Commencement No. 3 and Transitory, Transitional and Saving Provisions) Order 2015

Made

21 April 2015

The Welsh Ministers make the following Order in exercise of the powers conferred on them by section 145(3) and (4) of the Housing (Wales) Act 2014(1).

Title and interpretation

1.—(1) The title of this Order is the Housing (Wales) Act 2014 (Commencement No. 3 and Transitory, Transitional, and Saving Provisions) Order 2015.

(2) In this Order “the Act” (“y Ddeddf”) means the Housing (Wales) Act 2014.

Provisions coming into force on 27 April 2015

2. Subject to articles 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, the appointed day for the provisions of the Act listed in the Schedule to come into force for the purposes specified (insofar as they are not already in force) is 27 April 2015.

Provision coming into force on 1 July 2015

3. Subject to articles 4, 5 and 8, the appointed day for section 78 of the Act (deciding to have regard to intentionality) to come into force for all remaining purposes is 1 July 2015.

Transitory, transitional and saving provisions

4. The following transitory, transitional and saving provisions have effect.

(1) 2014 anaw 7.

Saving provision in relation to the Allocation of Housing and Homelessness (Eligibility) (Wales) Regulations 2014

5.—(1) Notwithstanding the commencement of section 61 of, and Schedule 2 to, the Act, the Allocation of Housing and Homelessness (Eligibility) (Wales) Regulations 2014⁽¹⁾ continue to have effect (subject to any subsequent amendment or revocation) as if made under paragraph 1 of Schedule 2 to the Act.

(2) Insofar as the Allocation of Housing and Homelessness (Eligibility) (Wales) Regulations 2014 continue to have effect by virtue of paragraph (1), they do so subject to the following modifications—

- (a) in regulation 5(1) the reference to “Part 7 of the 1996 Act” has effect as a reference to “section 66, 68, 73 or 75 of the Housing (Wales) Act 2014”; and
- (b) in regulation 6(1) the reference to “Part 7 of the 1996 Act” has effect as a reference to “section 66, 68, 73 or 75 of the Housing (Wales) Act 2014”.

Transitory modification to the Act

6.—(1) This article comes in force on 27 April 2015.

(2) This article makes a transitory modification to section 75(2)(d) of the Act with effect until 1 July 2015.

(3) Until section 78 of the Act (deciding to have regard to intentionality) comes fully into force by virtue of article 3, section 75(2)(d) is to be read as if the words “if the authority is having regard to whether or not the applicant is homeless intentionally (see section 77)” were omitted.

Transitional provision in relation to pending applications for accommodation or assistance

7.—(1) This article comes in force on 27 April 2015.

(2) This article applies in relation to an applicant who has applied, before the 27 April 2015, to a local housing authority for accommodation or assistance in obtaining accommodation under Part 7 of the Housing Act 1996⁽²⁾.

(1) S.I. 2014/2603 (W. 257).

(2) 1996 c. 52.

(3) Notwithstanding articles 2 and 3, Part 7 of the Housing Act 1996 continues in force in relation to such applicants.

Transitory modification to the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970

8.—(1) This article makes a transitory modification to the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970(1) as it applies in Wales, with effect from 27 April 2015.

(2) Until Schedule 2 (social services functions) to the Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act 2014(2) comes into force, Schedule 1 (social services functions) to the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 is to be read in its application to Wales as if—

- (a) the entry for the Housing Act 1996 were omitted;
- (b) in place of that entry there is inserted:

Draft Scotland Bill “falls short” in some “critical areas”- Devolution Committee

The previous UK Government’s draft legislative clauses for the new Scotland Bill do not meet the “spirit or substance” of the Smith Commission’s recommendations on welfare and benefits, and require extensive redrafting in other key areas, a Scottish Parliamentary Committee said today.

The Devolution (Further Powers) Committee today published its unanimous interim report into the draft legislation produced by the former UK Government in the light of the recommendations of The Smith Commission. Now that a new Scottish Secretary is in place, the Committee is urging the new UK Government to take the opportunity to reflect upon the concerns highlighted during its extensive evidence gathering process.

Committee Convener Bruce Crawford MSP said:

“All political parties involved in the Smith Commission agreed to take forward its recommendations as quickly as possible while ensuring that the draft legislation met the spirit and substance of those recommendations.

“In the short period of time the Committee had to consider the legislation prior to the dissolution of the UK Parliament, we decided to focus our attention on key issues such as taxation and borrowing, welfare and benefits and The Crown Estate.

“The Committee believes that the current proposals do not yet meet the challenge of fully translating the political agreement reached in the Smith Commission into legislation. For example, as we heard in our evidence taking, there is no power for the Scottish Parliament to top up reserved benefits despite that being one of the powers highlighted at the time of publication. The Committee also seeks reassurance that any new benefits or top-up benefits introduced in Scotland would result in additional income for a recipient.

“The Committee is disappointed that the currently proposed legislation sells Smith short.”

Specifically, the Committee concluded—

Welfare

“...the Committee has concerns with a number of the welfare provisions and considers that the relevant clauses do not yet meet the spirit and substance of the Smith Commission’s recommendations and potentially pose challenges in any attempt to implement them.” (paragraph 318)

“The Committee reaffirms the agreement in the Smith Commission report that the Scottish Parliament should have the power to create new benefits in areas of devolved responsibility and also new powers to make discretionary payments in any area of welfare without the need to obtain prior permission from the DWP, whilst recognising that there will be a need for the Scottish Government to provide the DWP with early notification of its intentions because of the potential for overlap with the administrative responsibilities of the UK Government in welfare matters.” (paragraph 322)

Income Tax

“.....there are significant issues still to be resolved regarding the implementation of the new powers, such as an appropriate definition of residency for a Scottish taxpayer, the details of the administration of the new regime (who collects the tax and how it will function), the costs on business and individuals, the need to avoid double taxation and the timing and phasing of the new powers on income tax relative to those already devolved under the Scotland Act 2012.” (paragraph 503)

Fiscal Framework

“...the Committee concludes that any final detail of the fiscal framework [intergovernmental agreement setting out the principles and operation of devolved taxes and impact of that on the Barnett formula] and the other matters we have considered is provided to the Scottish Parliament before the question of legislative consent to any new bill is considered in the early months of 2016.” (paragraph 512)

Parliamentary oversight of intergovernmental relations

“The Committee concludes that ensuring that the Scottish and UK Parliaments, and other devolved assemblies, can effectively scrutinise inter-governmental relations represents a significant challenge posed by the Smith Commission for these legislatures.” (paragraph 563)

In areas such as taxation, fiscal framework and welfare ... “We recommend both Governments reach an urgent agreement on just how this [intergovernmental relations and agreements] will be achieved and for the Scottish Government to report to the Committee on what arrangements it proposes to put in place for parliamentary oversight.” (paragraphs 177 & 328)

The Crown Estate

“The Committee ... has serious concerns regarding the situation in Scotland post-devolution and the competition and confusion that may arise from the creation of ‘two Crown Estates’.” (paragraph 542)

Permanency of the Scottish Parliament

“The Committee recommends that the Scottish electorate should be asked to vote in a referendum if the issue of permanency was in question, with majorities also being required in the Scottish Parliament and the UK Parliament.” (paragraph 497)

“In the immediate aftermath of the UK General Election, the Prime Minister indicated that he was committed to delivering on the recommendations of the Smith Commission.

“As a Committee we call on the new UK Government to consider our report – agreed unanimously - as a matter of urgency and to work with the Scottish Parliament to help ensure that we have legislation that achieves the objectives that all five parties on the Committee signed up for.”

Background

A copy of the Committee’s report can be found here <http://www.scottish.parliament.uk/parliamentarybusiness/81842.aspx>

Following the UK General Election, the Committee will re-commence with its detailed scrutiny of all of the provisions in any ‘Scotland Bill’ that may be introduced by a new UK Government in its first Queen’s Speech.

The Committee expects to issue a further call for evidence in mid-2015 and to take further evidence during the remainder of 2015 and early 2016, with a view to issuing a Final Report on any bill and the issue of legislative consent before the Scottish Parliament is dissolved in advance of the Scottish Parliamentary elections of May 2016.
