

I daresay the dualling of the railway between Wreccsam and Chester is the priority but what about investigating the economic feasibility of a rail link from Ruabon to Llangollen?

As a member of the Llangollen Railway Trust, I think it would attract more visitors to the town, provide more business for the Llangollen Railway and provide a link with the UK national network for people living everywhere in and around the Dee valley.

PS: How about providing/looking for finance as well to extend the Llangollen Railway from Corwen to Bala? Look at what it's done for the tourist trade in Llangollen up to now. Look what it's likely to do for Corwen. Just think what it could do for ailing Bala and district (before it's too late).
