Dear Vice President Šefčovič

Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on measures to reduce the cost of deploying high-speed electronic communications networks (COM(2013)147)

I wanted to draw to your attention recent correspondence on subsidiarity concerns raised by the National Assembly for Wales' Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee (which I Chair) at its meeting last week.

I have written to William Cash MP and to Baroness O'Cathain, the Chairs respectively of the House of Commons' European Scrutiny Committee and the House of Lords' EU Sub-Committee B, about the above proposal. I attach a copy of my letters and the associated report from my Committee.

As you will be aware, the Treaty of Lisbon introduced an 'early warning mechanism' on subsidiarity (set out in Protocol No.2 to the treaty) which gives national parliaments (in consultation with their regional parliaments where appropriate) the opportunity to submit 'Reasoned Opinions' to the European Commission on any subsidiarity aspects of draft legislative proposals published by the EU Institutions.

You will see from the correspondence that the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee shares the concerns raised by both the UK Government and the House of Commons European Scrutiny Committee. In particular, the Committee believes that the proposed Regulation's aim would be best achieved by action at Member State level, and that the measures supported by the proposed Regulation – such as infrastructure sharing, information provision, street works coordination and in-built broadband equipment in buildings – would all be best implemented at a local level.

I would be grateful if you could take the Committee's representations into account, on behalf of the National Assembly for Wales. As a sub-state legislature we aim to engage positively with EU matters, particularly in relation to our consideration of issues relating to subsidiarity. We very much look forward therefore to hearing your thoughts on how our concerns could be effectively addressed.

Yours sincerely
