Question	Answer
01	Not sure No not sure, because autism has a huge varied of people and I feel like could be missed out on support x
02	Yes
03	No They understand the people in the area, and know that support is missing but they could over look people without helping or supporting to save money, which wouldn't help x
04	Yes It would insure that the bill had more force behind it, like statements for example it gives the family guidance and support on what is needed
08	Time scales are very big and lots of children are left with no support x
10	Not sure It might be difficult to insure they get full support so maybe if it's listed a new family would have some idea of the level of support there child needs, there are a lot who slip thro the net with no or little support Which isn't the best outcome for the children
11	Autism can have a huge impact on a family They have given birth to a healthy normal baby, then as the baby grows they notice things which slowly you ask questions within family unit which partners maybe won't see or what to see, then huge wltng times for
12	Family don't always want to take outside help and might say no at 1st,
13	Not sure
15	It should be written in the guidance.
16	Yes
17	It should happen all the time.

	A lot of people assume with autism that there's only a certain behaviour, or think your child is naughty or spoilt It can be very difficult when a child looks normal
